

ARROW MUST GO ON TRIAL ONCE MORE

Shared of One Bribery Charge He Now Has to Face a Second Indictment

MARKABLE COURT SCENE

Down With Tears Streaming Faces, Embrace Defendant

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—Clarence Darrow, the Chicago lawyer who found not guilty today on the charge of having bribed a prospective juror in the McNamara case, must stand trial on a second indictment, according to an announcement made by United States Attorney Frederick.

After the acquittal, he sat in a modest cafe, a few blocks from the scene of his notable trial and vindication. This afternoon, surrounded by a few intimate friends, finding more relief in the personal scores of congratulatory telegrams than in his luncheon, Darrow was apparently unconcerned over the state of the prosecution. Although determined to discuss the threatened second trial, he said he was too happy to be out of the country, which began in his mind an hour after the dict had been given to the world.

Remarkable Court Room Scene
The court room scene which followed the reading of the verdict, just minutes after the jury had retired, was one that had no parallel in city. Jurors, whose phlegmatic demeanors had given no hint of their feelings throughout the three days and more which elapsed since trial was begun, embraced the defendant with tears streaming in their cheeks, declaring that it was the happiest day of their lives. Court officials, including Judge Hurford and the half-dozen bailiffs, joined the congratulations, and Mr. Darrow, to whom the trial was a colossal strain, stood speechlessly with one hand in her husband's or the other wringing those of jurors, for two hours the court room scene practically unchanged. Mr. Darrow's attorneys expressed regret when informed that there is the last and biggest of the picnics Manitou this summer, the All-States celebration is scheduled for tomorrow. It will begin at 10 o'clock the morning at Manitou park, and continue throughout the day. The feature of the morning program will be an oratorical contest, the subject of the orations being the native land of the speakers. Entries already have been made for Texas, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, and probably will be made before tomorrow morning. The prize in the contest will be a handsome sterling silver cup given by the town of Manitou. All speakers who wish to take part are asked to notify Mayor Lennon of the Manitou Journal before 8 a. m. tomorrow, when entries will close. At morning session E. E. Nichols will give an address on "Manitou." Various songs and choruses also will be given. In the afternoon the program will be shifted to Soda Springs park, where, beginning at 2 o'clock, a special concert will be given by the Colorado Island band, a quartet and a chorus. The picnic will be attended by a total of 10,000 or 12,000 people, according to indications.

Ill-States Picnic, Manitou Tomorrow

MASSACHUSETTS PEOPLE HEAR T. R.

SUPPORTERS SING HYMNS AT FOUR MEETINGS

Scene of Huge Revival Rather Than Opening of Political Campaign

BOSTON, Aug. 17.—The Progressive campaign in Massachusetts today was opened by ex-President Roosevelt with scenes departing from those traditionally associated with a political rally. Some of those who took part in it compared it rather to a huge revival meeting.

Supporters of the new party gathered in throngs, sang hymns and cheered Colonel Roosevelt, the central figure in it all, who made four speeches, semimixed of politics and morals, now exhorting his hearers to see up a high standard in public and private life, again speaking bluntly in his conception of political procedure and criticizing his opponents sharply. At each meeting of the Progressive party, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," in one of his speeches Colonel Roosevelt referred to President Taft as a "dead issue."

Motors to Speaking Places
The former president motored from Providence, R. I., where he spoke last night. He discussed the New England campaign with the Progressive leaders here, then went by automobile to Revere Beach, where he made his first speech. After a long address to the Assumption society, he returned to Revere Beach for the Massachusetts Progressive banquet, at which he made his third speech. On his return to Boston, he addressed a crowd on the common, later taking a train for New York.

At Revere Beach the Colonel gave a special wave of his hand to the Roosevelt club from Beverly, Mass. President Taft's summer home, which carried a banner inscribed, "We Love Beverly," but Oh, You Oyster Bay.

Criticism of Wilson's Remarks
In his main speech of the day the Colonel criticized Woodrow Wilson's remarks about the Democratic and Progressive platforms, defended the recall of judicial decisions, and assailed a

OPEN FORUM WILL BE HELD TONIGHT

The people of Colorado Springs will have an opportunity this evening to show their interest in a type of public meeting that is as yet almost unknown in this city, but which promises to become an important factor in the life of the community. This is the open forum, which holds its first meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the Odeon theatre. This address will be given by Dr. Loran D. Osborne of the State university, who will speak on "The Struggle for Industrial Democracy." After the address there will be an opportunity for questions and brief remarks from the floor in order to throw light on as many phases of the question under discussion as possible.

The gathering this evening is the first of a series planned by the committee of the open forum. Next Sunday night there will be an address by Clement G. Clark of Minneapolis on "The New Highways," and Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard university will speak September 8 on "Why Is a Boss?" For October, the committee is planning a series of meetings on some of the most important of the measures that have been initiated under the new law of the state, and on which the people will vote in November.

The program for this evening follows:
Tonight's Program
Song, "Way Down Upon the Swanee River"
Song, "If All Were Brothers True"
Introductory remarks by the chairman, George M. Howe
"The Lost Chord"
Address: "The Struggle for Industrial Democracy"
Dr. Loran D. Osborne of Boulder
Questions from the floor. Time limit for each speaker, three minutes.
Closing Song, "America"

"People Have Guns Loaded and Traps Set for Political Weasels," Says Philip B. Stewart Regarding Alleged Court Attack on Petitions

The attention of Philip B. Stewart, Progressive Republican candidate for governor, was called to the news article in the press yesterday declaring that the legality of petitions filed for various candidacies before the primaries will be attacked in the courts.

He remarked that many statements incorporating a threat of this character have appeared, but that he has no definite knowledge, aside from press reports, that such an effort is actually to be made. In the event such an attempt should be made, he said:

"The whole thing is a technical penny-in-the-slot proceeding. It is prompted and financed by the invisible government back of our visible government, and it will absolutely fail. The men and women of Colorado who have their guns loaded and traps set to destroy these political weasels will simply make the hunt a little more strenuous and the destruction a little more complete."

The bipartisan political machine dares not face the army of the people lined up against it. It resorts as usual to technicality and subterfuge. First, it smothered a fair and honest expression of the people by refusing presidential preference primaries. The ostensible reason assigned for its refusal was: "There is no law for it." The argument that there is no law against it fell upon deaf ears. Next, it took advantage of its technical power to prescribe the "acid test" in many counties for the purpose of keeping Progressive Republicans out of the primaries preceding the assemblies. Luckily, the present primary law interposed an objection on behalf of the people at this point by permitting us to file our candidacies by petition, subject to the will of the voters at the primaries. This reported attack represents the last stand.

"Leaders of the bipartisan plunderbund have been whipped out of their boots. There is nothing left of the old machine but the steering gear. This remnant, however, has willing hands at the wheel to steer it into some technical proposition in the hope that repairs can be procured."

"The people of Colorado have concluded to dispossess their bad tenants this year and take charge of the ranch themselves."

"So far as I am able to determine from the reports furnished me, the attack is purely technical. If signers of a petition should fail to dot an 'i' or cross a 't,' I suppose such error would furnish the machine a pretext for contest in the courts. The whole proceeding is ridiculous, not the work of adult men and women, but the play of children."

"It is unfortunate that such rascals who attempt the interposition of technicalities of this character, when a matter so vital to state government is involved, can find even temporary refuge in the courts. Courts are instituted by the people for the redress of wrong and not for its perpetuation."

"Press reports indicate that neither the Democratic nor Republican machine committees possess the nerve to institute proceedings of the character contemplated, on their own initiative. The bipartisan machine dares not come out in the open and challenge the voters of the state. The whole thing is a frameup, and fortunately for the decent voters of Colorado, this does not happen to be the year for frameups."

STEALING ELECTION OR NOMINATION IS WORSE THAN PICKING A POCKET

REVERE BEACH, Mass., Aug. 17.—Honesty in nominations and elections and social and industrial justice, was the text of a speech delivered here today by Theodore Roosevelt. The Progressive candidate also contrasted his attitude towards the Progressive platform with that of Governor Wilson toward the Democratic platform. He expressed in the latter's speech of acceptance, Whereas Governor Wilson said, stated that "the platform is not a program," Colonel Roosevelt declared that the Progressives treated their platform as a program and a "contract which we shall scrupulously fulfill if the people give us the power."

Colonel Roosevelt said in part: "Men and women of Massachusetts—and on the platform on which I stand make the same appeal of serious and sober purpose to the women as to the men—I come to this state, with its background of adherence to lofty ideals and ask you in the name of Massachusetts, past to place the Massachusetts of today on the side of those who battle for all that is highest and best in our national life."

"The first essential in securing the right of the people to rule is to secure the unimpaired condemnation of dishonesty in nominations and elections. To steal a nomination or to steal an election is even more heinous than to steal a purse, for it is a theft of the people's rights, it is a theft from the people."

COLLEGE WILL GET THE CLARK LIBRARY

Within a short time the library of the late William B. Clark, who died here July 12, will be transferred from his home on West Boulder street to Coburn library, Colorado college.

Mr. Clark's brother, who was here until a few days ago, told intimate friends that Colorado college will receive the library, in accordance with his brother's wishes. It is probable he will return from Detroit soon and arrange to have the books moved. The will has not been filed.

Mr. Clark's library will be the biggest single bequest of that nature that has yet been given to Colorado college, and numbers approximately 5,000 volumes. It is especially rich in art, architecture and music, the collection numbering many large and authentic editions on those subjects. The library also contains a great deal of music in bound volumes, and writings in French, Spanish, German and Italian. There are many volumes of classical literature, and a complete set of the International Science Library, numbering more than 100 volumes. The collection includes many fine groups on mathematics and quite a number of original editions.

One set is a 14-volume edition of Don Quixote in the original, and another is a 16-volume edition of Burton's translation of the Arabian Nights. This edition, it is understood, will not be placed in the library proper at Colorado college, but will be kept for reference.

Mr. Clark's shelves contain many old and out-of-the-way books, and his library is estimated to be worth at least $10,000.

Other important libraries given the college in the last few years were those of Dr. S. E. Solly, whose books were left to the medical section of the college, and the library of the late Judge Nash of Leadville. Prof. J. H. Koss also has given the college hundreds of books in the last two years.

As a whole, Every honest man should set his face like flint against such dishonesty, whether it takes the form of swindling at the polls or debauching legislatures or theft in a nominating convention.

"Two years ago the fight against Mr. Lorimer was started by a great Chicago newspaper, and was continued by certain private individuals—and we who then took part in that fight did so at a time when its average public man obviously thought it would come to nothing. Gradually and especially in the recent contest in the Republican primaries we hammered it into the heads of the politicians that the people were against both Lorimer and Lorimerism, and then, the men who had been seeking profit by Lorimer's support, so long as they believed the would be useful and some even of the men who had hitherto defended him, turned against him. But, friends, remember that our real concern was not in smothering one bad man who by improper methods had secured his own election to the senate but in smothering the kind of politics which he symbolized."

"It is a bad thing to win a senate"

REBELS BESIEGE MANY AMERICANS

NO MEXICAN TROOPS CAN BE SPARED TO AID

Miners in Sinaloa Send Frantic Message to Texas Gov. for Help

CULIACAN, Mex., Aug. 17.—Reports of fighting by Americans of the Tomhill mine, in the state of Sinaloa, with rebels and strikers besieging them are received here. It is said by officials here that no federal troops can be spared to the Americans' aid. The Tomhill mine is located 30 miles from the coast. The American consul at Mazatlan has received an appeal for aid. The United States gunboat Denver is due at Mazatlan within the next few days. Mazatlan is the nearest point on the coast to the Tomhill mine. It is improbable that an overland journey will be attempted by the besieged Americans who are said to number about 200.

Send Appeal to Texas Governor

EL PASO, Aug. 17.—A letter received here today contained a telegram to be sent to Governor Culberson of Texas, being an appeal for aid from the besieged miners at the Tomhill mine in Sinaloa. The message, signed by J. B. Underwood and three other Americans, says in part:

"We are assaulted by guns and dynamite and murdered and robbed by workmen, assisted by government troops, supposed to be for protection for us. This is an anti-foreign rising pure and simple. The Mazatlan consul was advised and said that help would be sent, but we have been since advised that they could send no protection. Please make the matter energetically as we are at the mercy of a band of bandits."

Government Troops Advancing

JUAREZ, Mex., Aug. 17.—It is considered by railroad men that federal troops cannot occupy Juarez before Monday at the earliest. With the army of 5,000 federals under General S. Rabasco, and 2,000 federals from the southern army, work was begun today to repair the destroyed railway over which the government troops are advancing. In advance of the federal army, which today reached San Pedro, 40 miles from Juarez, is a repair train, and today two trains left Juarez to repair the road from this end. About 30 miles of the Mexican Northwestern railway has been destroyed by rebels between San Pedro and Juarez, besides burned and track torn up. "Way Railroad" has not discontinued cavalry on heading of the rebel evacuation of

PROGRESSIVES WITHIN G. O. P. LEADING

Assembly Republicans Get a Late Start, Compared With Stewart, Et Al.

Colorado to Have Political Battle Unlike Any Ever Waged in State

By WALTER LAWSON WILDER

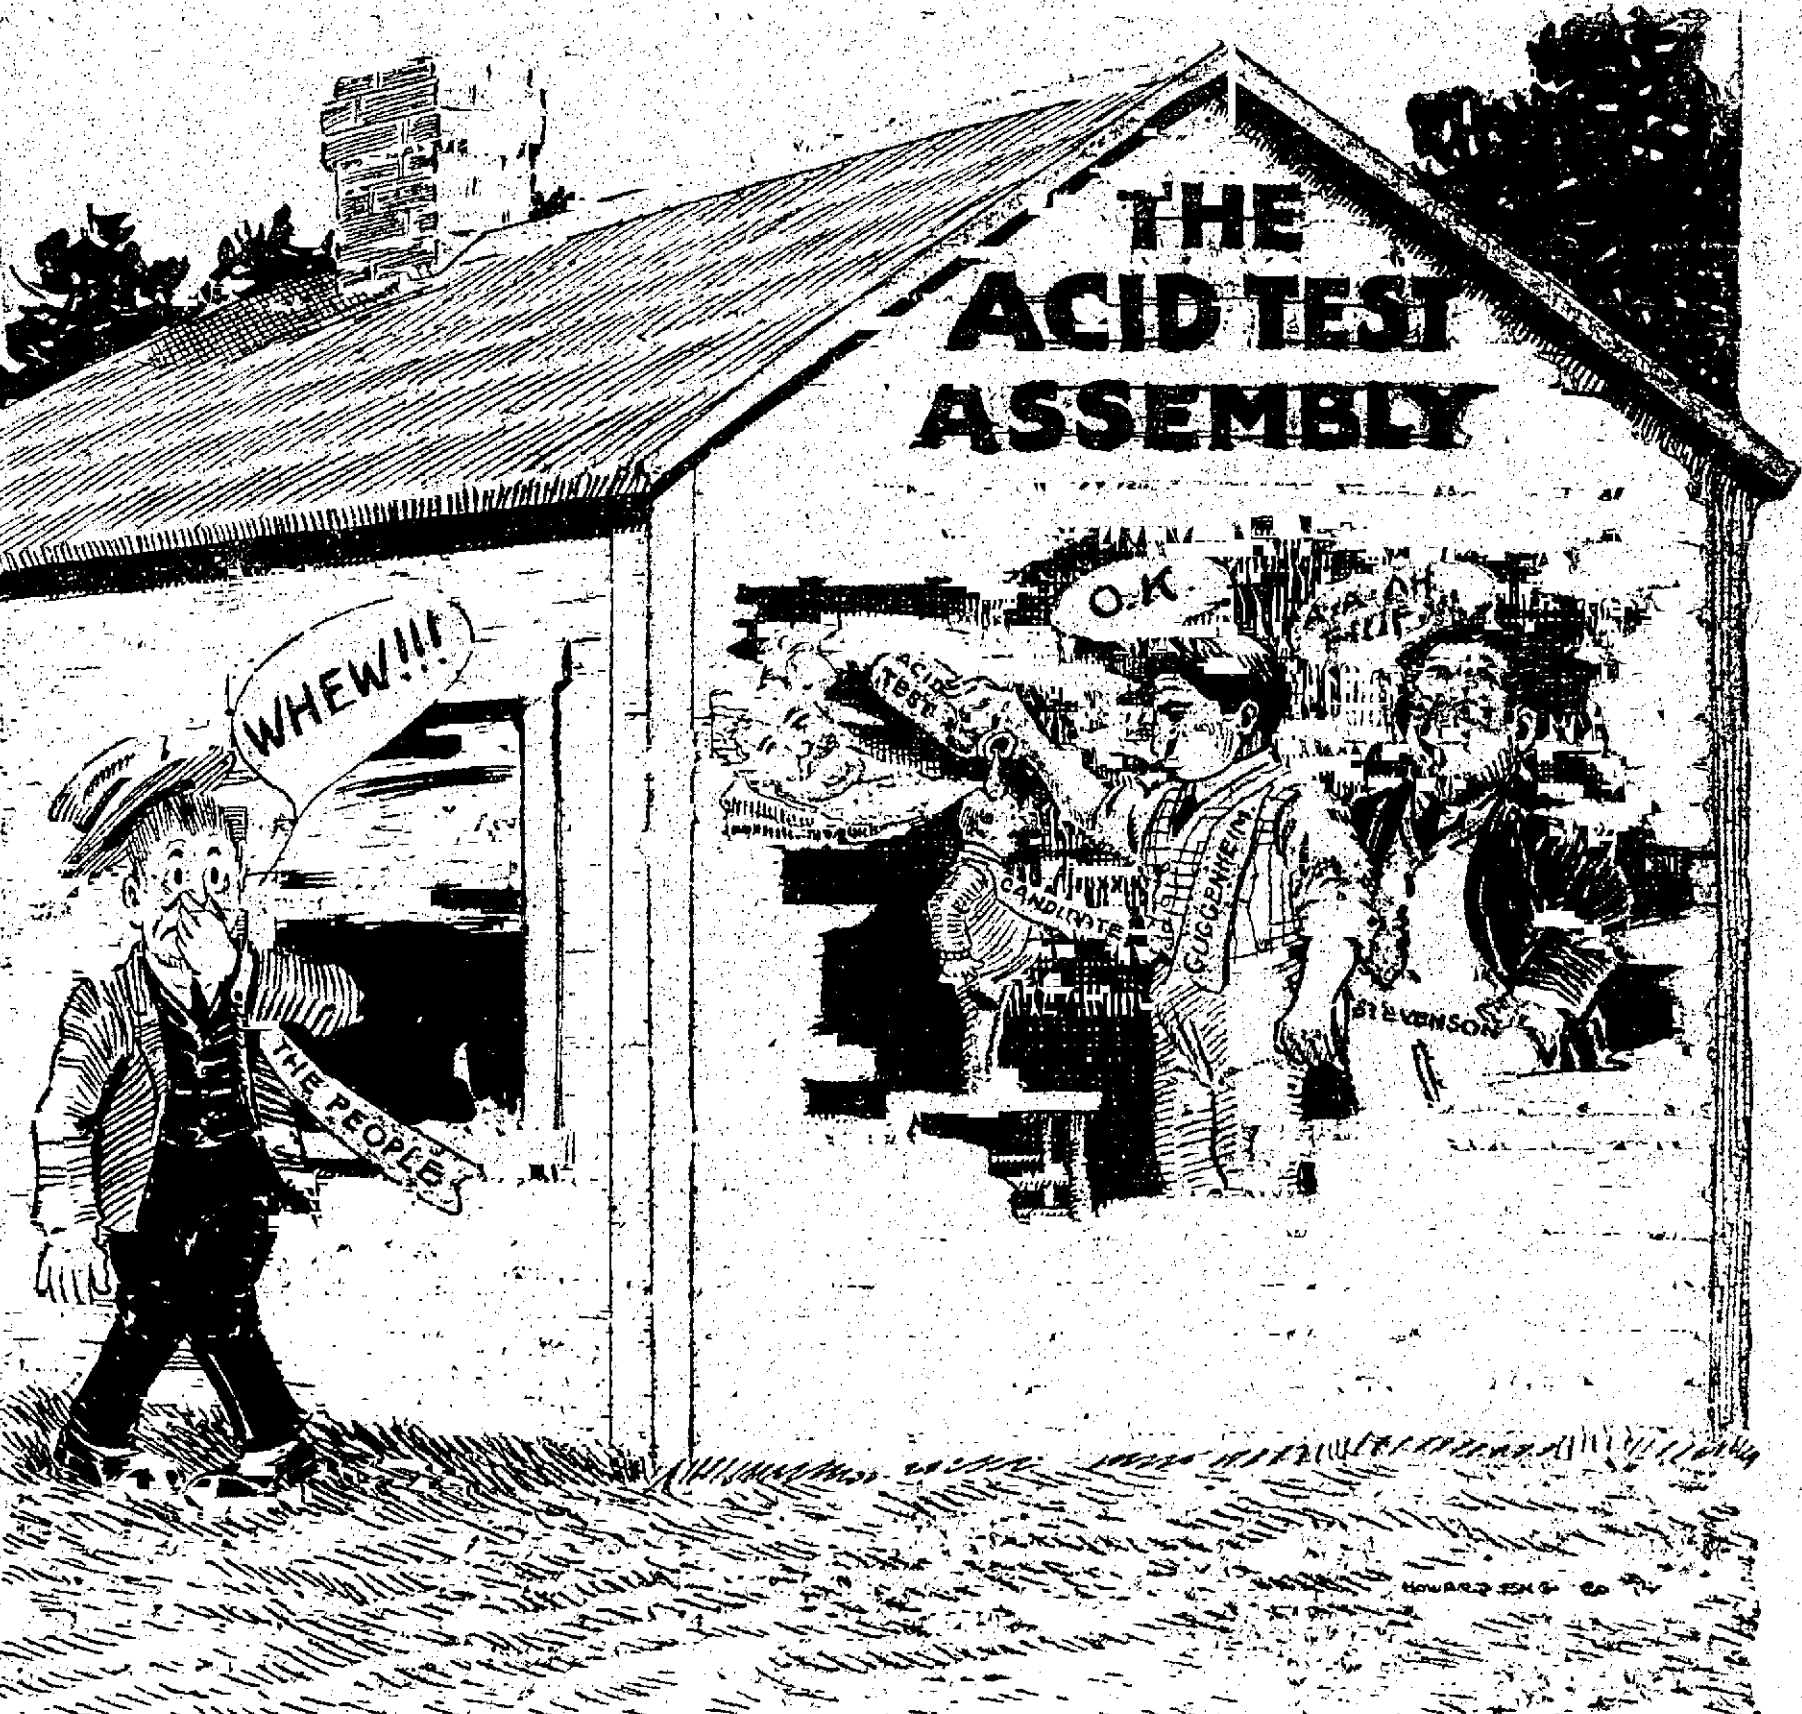

DENVER, Aug. 17.—On Monday next begins in Colorado a political campaign unlike any ever witnessed before in this state. For three weeks, two sets of candidates, the one Democratic and the other Republican, will labor with more or less activity, not to convince the voters that one party is entitled to the control of government, but to convince the members of the party to which each individual candidate belongs that he should have the nomination for the office to which he aspires. At the end of this campaign, on Tuesday, September 16, the party voters will express their preferences, and then will begin the usual campaign of rivalry between Democrats and Republicans, with the Progressive party as a possibly dangerous third competitor for public favor.

Among the Republicans the contest of the primary campaign will be between the nominees of the party assembly and the candidates who have filed their nominations by petition. In only two instances are there more than one assembly candidate for each position. The assembly nominated four persons for the two places as congressmen-at-large, and two persons for auditor. It also nominated two candidates for governor, but one of these has withdrawn his name.

No Danger of Divided Vote

The Progressive Republicans made no contest in the party assembly, but filed their nomination by petition, having the rather unusual good fortune to agree upon a single candidate for each one of the places to be filled, thereby avoiding the danger of a divided vote. For superintendent of public instruction, and university regent for the short term, no nominations were made for Progressive Republicans.

PROGRESSIVES

There has been some talk of taking action in the courts to prevent the Progressive names being placed upon the Republican primary ballots but the secretary of state, in certifying the names to the county clerks today in order that they may reach the local officials within the limits prescribed by law.

Today the assembly Republican candidates hold a meeting to make plans for the campaign but this is getting a late start as compared with Vincent, Dodge, Stewart, Griffith and the other Progressives within the party who began making their appeal to the people direct several weeks ago, and who have had most encouraging results from their work.

No Party Will Win All

There is a very general belief that no party will win on all its candidates this year, and it is also unlikely that either the Progressives or the assembly men will get through the primary election with an unbroken roll. So far as the four candidates that have been named are concerned, the odds are very decidedly in their favor and there are others whose chance is almost as good. Clarence P. Dodge, the Colorado Springs candidate for congressman-at-large does not have the knack of getting his name in the newspapers as often as some of the more experienced politicians but he is surprisingly well known throughout the state and his friends are of the kind that win votes. He ought to make a good run at the primary, and if nominated he will draw at the election many votes from outside his party lines. He has had considerable experience in legislation and other public affairs, is well posted upon matters of national legislation, both as concerns local and national affairs and is clearly of a type of congressman that does excellent service to state and nation.

I may state as a fact upon the best authority that the Progressive Republican state candidates will have the support in many of the strong Republican counties of the regular or assembly candidates on the county ticket. And the reason for this is it is explained by such county candidates is that they realize that the Progressive Republican state ticket will be stronger before the people than the assembly state ticket can be and if the Progressive state candidates are nominated by the primary it will mean that the local candidates whoever they are will be more likely to win than they would be if the assembly candidates were approved.

Among the Democrats

Among the Democrats the situation is different from that of the Republicans inasmuch as many of the Progressive Democrats participated in the state assembly. Evidence of this is found in the list of assembly candidates which is much longer than that of the Republicans. Thus there are two candidates for the long term senatorship, three for governor, three for supreme judge, four for the two nominations as congressman-at-large, three for secretary of state, two for auditor, two for attorney general, four for lieutenant governor, four for school superintendent, four for the two positions as university regent for the long term and four for the three places as electors from the Second district. It would seem that this was variety enough for please anyone, but the Progressive Democrats have further nominated by petitions a candidate for United States senate for the long term, one for governor, one for secretary of state, one for auditor and one for treasurer, the latter being in opposition to Auditor Lodge, of Manitou who received the unanimous vote of the assembly it being the usual practice of recent years to promote the auditor to the position of treasurer, the latter official being ineligible for reelection.

Tom Tynan, who goes upon the Democratic primary ticket by petition, really has a good chance of getting the nomination, his strongest competitor for the place being Senator Ammons, who is generally regarded as a progressive Ammons, however, has the advantage of being an experienced campaigner while it remains to be seen what Tynan can, or will do in this line.

Progressive Republicans and Progressives

A great amount of foolishness has been printed mainly in the Denver newspapers, the past week regarding the consolidation or combination of the Progressive Republicans with the Progressives of the third party. At one time we were asked to believe that an arrangement of this kind had been practically completed. No one with a knowledge of the course that has been pursued thus far by Stewart, Dodge, Griffith and their associates and supporters took any stock in these stories, which, however, found some range of belief. The course that has been followed by the Progressive Republican leaders is thoroughly understood and thoroughly approved by their followers. They have never been outside the Republican party, and they were outside the Republican assembly only for the reason that the machine leaders in control of the party organization did not dare to risk the test of strength in the caucuses, primaries, county and state assemblies. At the present time there are three classes of politicians that are interested in misrepresenting the course and position of the Progressive Republicans and that would like to drive them out of the Republican party and into the third party ranks.

The Republican machine leaders have often taken the position that they would rather be in control of a minority party than to be in the majority party without its control. Some of them have gone so far as to assert that there was more profit for them in being the leaders of a minority party than in being the leaders of a majority party, and upon credible testimony their assertion has been proved. They would not be at all displeased to drive out of the party all the progressives and thereby assure party defeat. If in so doing they could assure themselves against the humiliation and loss that will come to them as a result of their defeat at the primary election, the Democrats would like to see the Republican Progressives outside the ranks.

CHURCH OF PROGRESSIVE SPIRITUAL SCIENCE

Republican ranks because they are convinced that the party would be stronger under progressive leadership than it would be under machine leadership. They know that a progressive victory at the primary means a united Republican party, while a machine victory means a divided Republican party. And they also know that if the Republican Progressives are driven out of that party, some of them will find an abiding place under the Wilson banner, especially if the Democratic state ticket should be nominated by the Progressives of that party.

Third Party Would Like It

And finally the Roosevelt, or third party Progressives, would like to see the Republican Progressives expelled from their political home, because the Progressives realize that such an expulsion, with a similar event on the Democratic side, is their only possible chance of making a creditable showing in this state this year. Outside the presidential electors, the Progressive ticket has not developed any strength, either in Denver or out in the state. Much stranger things have happened in Colorado than that the Roosevelt electors should carry the state, but if the Progressive Republicans and the platform Democrats win in the primary election the Progressive senatorial, congressional and state returns will be included among the "scattering."

Many Democrats Distrust Wilson

A rather interesting piece of political gossip concerns the attitude of a certain class of Democratic voters who refuse to take kindly to Woodrow Wilson as a presidential candidate. He is too much of a "silk stocking," they say, too much of a theorist, too much of a collegian and a doctrinaire—though most of them do not use those exact words. They do not like his position on the Chinese labor question, and they say that there is nothing in his personality that appeals to the working men. And inasmuch as they think rather less of Taft than they do of Wilson, it is claimed that in some of the mining and industrial counties a considerable number of Democratic votes will go to the Roosevelt electors. Here in Denver Danny Sullivan, recently elected sheriff along with the other Citizens, is at the head of the third party workers, and with the cooperation of Judge Ben Lindsey, who is sometimes styled "the best campaigner Denver ever had," it is not at all certain that the Roosevelt electors will have third or even second place in this city.

Of out-and-out third party Republicans the number is surprisingly small, in Denver and through the state. Wherever inquiry is made opinion is unanimous and universal. Stevens and Costigan do not represent the sentiment and feeling of the antimachine Republicans, while Vincent, Dodge, Stewart and Griffith do represent that sentiment. And the reason for this condition which has puzzled some shrewd observers has been simple in the fact that the Progressive Republicans are confident of their strength.

and have not the slightest doubt that they are going to win at the primary election and take possession of the party and make it an organization of Republicans for Republicans and not an organization by the machine for the machine.

Trend of Popular Sentiment

Straws show the wind currents, and the recent attitude of one or two of the Denver daily newspapers is highly significant of the trend of popular sentiment. Significant, too, is the protest of Parks, assembly candidate for nomination as governor, against the effort to rule Progressives off the primary ballot upon a legal technicality, and his statement that Stewart is an honorable and competent gentleman, whom, if nominated, it will be his pleasure to support. To some it may seem ungracious that the compliment cannot be returned by Stewart in kind, but the fight of the Progressive Republicans is one of principle and not of personalities, against a system and not against individuals. If the Progressive Republicans are beaten, they will be beaten in the election as they were beaten before the assemblies and in the national convention, by the rules, methods and activities of machine politics. And they cannot accept such a defeat as anything else than a call to continue the contest in a broader and freer field of action.

Fruit Growers, Because of Record Crops, Need Lower Shipping Rates

DENVER, Aug. 17.—On account of the record-breaking fruit crop which is expected all over the country, many of the farmers of Colorado fear that the year will be financially disastrous unless the railroad grant rates commensurate with the low price of their product. It is said that the peach crop, for example, has been a bumper one in all parts of the United States, and that with the present low prices it may be impossible to move part of the crop on the western slope. If this is so, Colorado's famous peaches will meet the ignominious fate of being fed to the farmers hogs or allowed to rot on ground.

So far the railroads have not considered a reduction of rates to meet emergency, though they are considering making a passenger rate to fruit pickers of one-half fare to the west slope, the Grand valley region, North Fork, Delta, Montrose and similar points.

Refrigerator cars are being rushed to the scene of action from all parts of the country. The Rio Grande has about 1,000 new hand, and as many more on the road. The fruit crop of Colorado will represent a total of more than 10,000 carloads as against less than that number last year.

Another record-breaker is the apple crop. It is estimated that the United States and Canada will produce about 40,000 barrels—an increase of 25 percent over 1911. Fortunately this matures more slowly than the peach and does not have to be moved rapidly.

In New York city the fruit merchants are appealing to the interstate commerce commission in the hope of compelling the railroads to grant a low rate if it appears that the crops cannot be moved otherwise. One of the merchants, W. N. White, said:

"This year the United States has the greatest fruit yield in its history. Fruit is cheap, but it could be much cheaper but for the fact that the profit of railroad that hauls the fruit is about times that of the man who raises. Thousands of fruit growers are told to feed most of their fruit to hogs, practically give it away to anyone who will come and cart it off."

WILSON WELCOMES WOMEN TO POLITICS

Declares Their Entry Into Field Is a Thing "Devoutly to Be Wished"

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 17.—Governor Woodrow Wilson, at the New Jersey celebration, today, welcomed the women of the nation into "the field of politics." Not a word did the governor say about woman suffrage, but as he stood before hundreds of women who gathered to organize the "Woman's Wilson and Marshall League of New Jersey," the governor pointed out that the entry of the women into politics would make the country's politics "the same pattern with our life," a thing "devoutly to be wished."

The governor, in his main speech at noon, apropos of the celebration, discussed the reform laws of the state, but digressed once into a reference to the third party, which he elaborated in a statement issued tonight. What the governor said in his speech was supposed to know the force that is behind a new party, the Progressive party. It is a force of discontent with these regular parties in the United States.

In his statement explaining that reference, the governor said, tonight, that the independent and progressive forces of the country had utterly failed to get control of the Republican party, but had ably proved their ascendancy and their entire control within the Democratic party, that the people had found they could make use of the Democratic party as a proper medium for their purposes.

This, he said, seemed to him most obvious, and the most encouraging circumstance in our politics. To the women the governor recommended participation in politics, because he said they were in contact with the high cost of living and the pocketbook.

N. Y. POLICE HEAD PLANS AN INQUIRY

Four Inspectors on Trial Next Week as Result of Recent Raids

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Thoroughly aroused by the charges of police graft following upon the disorderly house raids made by the district attorney's office, Police Commissioner Waldo, it was said tonight, plans a public investigation of his own.

Four inspectors will be placed on trial by the commission next week. It was said and asked to explain the existence of disorderly places in their districts. The record of Police Lieutenant Becker's bank deposits has now reached $3,000. Becker's accounts of $3,000 and $5,000, respectively, were furnished to the district attorney's office, today, by two more banks. Becker according to evidence gathered by the prosecution's office maintained a surveillance over disorderly houses which attempted to do business without paying protection. According to this evidence, Becker added one place which had been sold by one of the smaller protected vice trusts to an independent who failed to come across.

the opportunity to themselves to decide by vote whether the art is to be come live notwithstanding such decision for as the platform says the Progressive party demands such construction of the power of the courts as shall leave the people themselves the ultimate authority to determine fundamental questions social welfare and public policy.

These wealthy capitalists whose eyes are blinded by their own fitted pride so that they can no longer see with the clear vision of the big politicians who in close and crooked alliance with them and are seduced by them and the editors of the newspapers whom they control and who do their bidding will all labor against what I say for these men are the beneficiaries and apologists of privilege and of late years also have striven even more and more to trench privilege in the courts.

These men who miserably reveal us as attacking the courts are themselves the worst assailants of the courts for nothing will so harm the courts as to persuade the average American citizen that they are the bulwarks of privilege. Our proposal is to leave the courts absolutely unaffected in the exercise of their judicial function but where they exercise judicial functions and where they thwart the will of the people expressed through the executive branch of the government we propose to give to the people themselves after due deliberation the right finally to decide whether in any given case they regard the legislature or the courts as representing them best.

BOILING ELECTRICITY

From Fortiter Electricity.
An electric battery in which the current strength is multiplied by six when the liquid is raised to boiling heat has been devised by a Parisian inventor. To show how the battery acts he makes the following experiment. He takes a porcelain vessel which will stand the heat of the fire or of a gas flame and fills it with a weak solution of zinc sulfate. A zinc rod or plate is attached to a wood handle so as to dip it into the bath between the carbons. A small low voltage incandescent lamp is connected to the carbon dipping in the zinc the current given by the battery cell is very small and the lamp will hardly glow. Removing the zinc rod puts a small flame under the vessel so as to bring it about to a boil. Putting in the zinc again, it is found that the lamp now glows brightly and the inventor claims that the current which is measured by instruments is six times as much. His method is the subject of a French patent.

General Mills becomes chief of the division of militia affairs, relieving Brig. Gen. R. K. Evans, assigned to command the department of the Gulf, recently commanded by Brig. Gen. WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Taft's first official act today was to sign the $160,000,000 pension appropriation bill. The pension office was immediately notified and telegraph orders were sent to the 18 outlying agencies to start payment at once of the money so long held up by the delay in congress. Every pensioner in the United States will be paid by Tuesday at the latest.

ELECTRIC CRANES FALL SINKING A STEAMSHIP

PANAMA, Aug. 17.—A portion of the old French pier of Balboa, about 160 yards in length, collapsed early today and two heavy electric cranes fell on the Pacific Mail Steamship company's steamer Newport, causing it to sink. No lives were lost.

None too soon a popular movement has been set on foot in Australia to preserve the gigantic stringybarks (a native species of eucalyptus) of that country, which far exceed in height the famous "big trees" of California, and are the tallest trees in the world. These trees sometimes attain heights ranging from 400 to 500 feet. Their timber is exceedingly valuable, and for this reason they have been ruthlessly destroyed by lumbermen.

STEALING ELECTION

ship by such methods as Mr. Lorimer employed but it is not one whit worse than to steal a nomination for the presidency by such methods as he employed by the bosses who controlled the Republican convention at Chicago last June. Certain of our New England senators, I regret to say, took the lead both in conducting the campaign for the defense of Mr. Lorimer and in putting through the steal of the Republican nomination at Chicago. What ever else is to be said against these senators at least their action in these respects was consistent. When Senator Crane, Senator Aldrich, Senator Penrose, Senator Guggenheim, Senator Gallinger, Senator Dillingham and their associates together with Senator Bailey, Senator Johnson and their associates on the Democratic side, stood by Senator Lorimer and Senator Lorimer right to sit in the senate they were doing precisely and exactly what Messrs. Penrose, Crane, Guggenheim, Gallinger and their representatives later did when they secured the triumph of Lorimerism in the Republican convention at Chicago. There was no essential difference between the inquiry that culminated in Lorimer's election and the inquiry which culminated in the theft of the Chicago convention. I condemn those who stood for both forms of inquiry.

In his speech of acceptance Mr. Wilson (after asking "what is the meaning" of the Baltimore platform and answering his own question rather vaguely) states that he doesn't ask the people of the United States to adopt that platform and that "the platform is not a program." We Progressives are much more fortunate in our platform. We do not have to apologize for it nor to speak of it in language so carefully guarded as to convey the impression that we are endeavoring neither to repudiate it nor support it. We stand on our platform. We do ask that our platform be adopted by the nation. Our platform is our program. We treat it as such and scrupulously fulfill it if the people give us the power.

Proposals Definite and Concrete.

Our proposals are definite and concrete and our intention is to enact them into law and to make them part of the active governmental policy of the nation. At this moment I ask your attention only to the proposals that we make to secure social and industrial justice. In the first place we set forth definitely what we mean to do to secure at the present time in the way of social and industrial justice—for instance to secure by law one day's rest in seven for all wage workers an eight-hour day in continuous 24-hour industries, the prohibition of child labor, the establishment of an eight-hour day for women and young persons, the creation of minimum wage standards for working women, workmen's compensation acts, the securing of proper conditions of life and labor for workmen and women and the fixing of occupational health standards. We propose to secure these installations of social and industrial justice by action in both the nation and the several states. Therefore we propose to see that our representatives give the people these laws wherever in a state the Progressives come into power. In these matters we do not intend to let our public servants, our representatives decide for us whether or not we can have the laws necessary to give justice to those who need it; we propose to settle the matter for ourselves and we intend that our public servants shall give us the laws necessary in order to achieve the end we have in view. We do not intend to let either executive or legislative officers forbid us from having such laws and my friends neither do we intend to let the judges forbid us to have such laws.

Gives People Final Say.

Therefore in our platform we have stated that we intend to provide more exact and expedient methods of amending the federal constitution and that when in any state a state court declares an act passed for social and industrial justice unconstitutional we intend to amend the constitution of that state after an ample opportunity has been given the people to say

WOULD BE HOOSIERS' GOVERNOR

Juarez and marched to protect the border of Mexican city is not explained. He is coming slowly by train, repairing the road as he advances.

Has Commission Form Government

Determined to have some vestige of civil government the citizens of Juarez today met and named three commissioners each with equal power of ballot. In this way Juarez bore distinction of being the only city in Mexico with a commission form of government. On the day before Juarez was probably the only city in civilization with no government at all. All is orderly, however and the newly organized force has experienced little trouble. The town remains almost deserted the many refugees in El Paso fearing to return until the arrival of federal troops. The location of the rebel forces which is led by General Orozco left here for the south remains a mystery with no communication along the Mexican Central railroad.

NICARAGUAN FORCES

LOST 14 MEN IN FIGHT

MANAGUA, Aug. 16. (Delayed in transmission)—In the four days' battle between insurgents under Generals Mena and Zeledón, and government troops commanded by Gen. Emilio Chamorro for the possession of Managua, the Nicaraguan capital, which began with a bombardment on Sunday and ended in a victory for the defenders, the government forces lost 14 men killed and 125 wounded. The insurgent casualties are estimated between 400 and 500 men killed or wounded. In addition a number of noncombatants, including several women and children, lost their lives. All is quiet today. The battle ended Wednesday night when after the final repulse, the rebels retired in some disorder to Masaya, capital of a department of the same name to the south of Managua.

The battalion composed of three companies of American marines under command of Maj. Smedley D. Butler, which arrived here Thursday by way of Corinto to reinforce the smaller detachment of American blue jackets, was the cause of great relief to the Nicaraguan government and to Americans and other foreign residents as well as to citizens.

DARROW MUST GO ON TRIAL

(Continued From Page One.) would be a trial on the Bain indictment. They asserted that all of the evidence in the Bain case had been submitted in the trial just ended.

Jury Unanimous From Start. The jury was virtually unanimous when it left the box, said Chief Counsel Earl Rogers. The jurors themselves say that only one vital ballot was taken, although it was preceded by two others cast as "feelers."

Two o'clock next Monday has been fixed as the time for setting for trial of the second indictment against Darrow—that charging complicity in the attempt to bribe Juror Bain. Mr. Darrow announced that he would make no plans for the future before that date.

Although warned against any demonstration by the bailiffs, there was a spontaneous outburst of applause when Foreman M. R. Williams, in response to the court's query, stated that the jury had found a verdict of not guilty. There was a rush to the side of the bailiffs, but it was renewed a few moments later after Judge Hutton thanked and discharged the jury. Then ensued a remarkable scene.

ward and clasped hands with the attorney. The scene gradually resolved itself into a reception for Darrow and the jurors, friends of the erstwhile defendant crowding up to congratulate him and shake hands with the jurors, while the flashlights of newspaper photographers boomed from every angle of the court room.

Crowd Shows Utmost Confidence. The final scene in the trial which lasted several days more than three months was dramatic in the extreme. The crowd which filled the court room when the jury filed out at 9:25 o'clock was still intact when the electric buzzer in the room summoned the bailiff to that occupied by the jurors on the floor above. The waiting crowd, composed mostly of Darrow's friends, seemed confident the verdict would not be long in coming. The instructions of Judge Hutton convinced many of them that it would be a verdict of acquittal, and the sound of the buzzer followed by sudden activity among the bailiffs, electrified the spectators.

When the jurors filed into their seats hundreds searched the faces of the men for some indication of the result of their brief deliberation. Most of the faces were expressionless, while one or two showed suppressed excitement. What sounded like a long sigh and a few hand claps followed the announcement of Foreman M. R. Williams that the verdict was "not guilty." An effort had clearly been made to obey the warning against a demonstration and the spontaneous outburst ended abruptly.

The case went to the jury at 9:20 o'clock this morning after instructions by Judge George H. Hutton, the reading of which required just an hour. Court Eliminates First Count. Judge Hutton began his charge to the jury at 8:20 o'clock this morning. The court eliminated the first count in the indictment that Darrow had bribed George N. Lockwood, a regularly drawn juror in the case of J. B. McNamee. The evidence of other alleged crimes could not be considered if the jury believed that such crimes formed part of a general plan or system.

Darrow in Counsel's Custody. Darrow was placed in the custody of his chief counsel, Attorney Earl Rogers, upon the submission of the case to the jury. The penalty for the crime charged in the second count of the indictment is the only one upon which a verdict of guilty can be found, is a penitentiary sentence of from one to five years or a fine of $5,000.

count charged Darrow with attempting corruptly to influence a man about to be sworn as a juror.

The court also instructed that a verdict of guilty could not be found on the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices.

"If you find no evidence independent of the testimony of accomplices," said the judge, "you must find the defendant not guilty. Admission alleged to have been made to accomplices by the defendant should not be allowed as corroborative. The testimony of alleged accomplices, however, does not require corroboration."

This instruction applied to Lockwood. The instructions were regarded as very favorable to the defendant. One of the instructions disposed of the charge of bribing a juror, the court holding that there was no evidence to justify a verdict of guilty on that count. The jury was warned against uncorroborated testimony of alleged accomplices and the witness testifying under a promise of immunity.

The court also instructed that the defendant was not on trial for any of the several crimes charged against him except that directly contained in the indictment. Evidence of other alleged crimes could only be considered if the jury believed that such crimes formed part of a general plan or system.

Darrow in Counsel's Custody. Darrow was placed in the custody of his chief counsel, Attorney Earl Rogers, upon the submission of the case to the jury.

The penalty for the crime charged in the second count of the indictment is the only one upon which a verdict of guilty can be found, is a penitentiary sentence of from one to five years or a fine of $5,000.

With the formal thanking and discharging of the jury, the crowd rushed forward to congratulate the Chicago lawyer and his wife who had sat at his side since the trial began, but with only a passing acknowledgement Darrow and his wife rushed over to the jury box and Golding and Dunbar threw their arms about the erstwhile defendant, patting him on the back and declaring with smiles that it was the happiest day of their lives. Other jurors reached out to grasp his hands and the crowd pushed in and swarmed over the jury box.

TAFT UNDECIDED ABOUT CANAL BILL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Taft has not decided whether he will approve the Panama canal bill as agreed to by the senate and house conferees. The president told friends, today, that the free tolls provision of the bill might prove a serious embarrassment to the United States, and that he was not sure he could sign the bill in that shape.

Taft favors an amendment which, in effect, would permit other nations to test the free tolls provision by suits in United States courts. He was told by Senator Simmons, today, that it probably was too late to attach such an amendment to the bill. The house rules committee today made a special rule which prohibits the raising of any point of order against the measure. This drastic action was taken because of the opposition of last night, when Representatives Olmsted and Moore of Pennsylvania contended that the conferees had gone beyond their jurisdiction in accepting several senate amendments. Representative Alexander, in answering the statement of Mr. Moore, held that with free material, shipping would be greatly benefited, and that such a provision would in no sense affect the labor situation in America. He defended the admission of foreign-built ships to American registry, on the ground that American ship yards were not building vessels for the foreign trade.

The exclusion of railroad or trust-owned ships from using the canal, in the opinion of Representative Sims of Tennessee, Democrat, was worth all the labor and time taken to mold the bill. He felt, he said, that a long step forward should be taken in the solution of the trust problem.

jurors reached out to grasp his hands and the crowd pushed in and swarmed over the jury box.

officials to congratulate Darrow. "Hundreds of thousands of hallelujahs will go up from as many throats when they hear of this," said the judge, as he grasped the hand of the vindicated lawyer.

A reception in which the Darrows and members of the jury were the central figures followed and lasted almost until noon.

Although the members of the jury declared that they were always of one mind, three ballots were taken in order, as one of them said, that no "undue haste" would be shown. The first ballot was 8 to 4 for acquittal and the second 10 to 2. The third ballot was a unanimous vote for "not guilty." The result of the vote was received with applause and cheers for the jurors, the echoes of which were heard in the chambers below. The defendant dictated the following statement to the Associated Press:

Thanks Friends for Support.

"It has been a long, hard ordeal, and of course I have a great sense of relief at its close. None of those who know me ever believed that I was corrupt and their encouragement and faith has been my greatest help in this trial. The indictment and prosecution could not have happened except under the tense excitement and strain of the dramatic close of the McNamara case. I shall spend the rest of my life as I have that which is past in doing the best I can to serve the cause of the poor."

District Attorney Fredericks was not present when the verdict was announced. He was visibly perturbed when informed of it. "I have nothing to say," he said. "We gave the jury evidence which in our judgment was complete and convincing. I think the jury has taken into account what has been said by the defendant's counsel more than they have the evidence. However, we do not quarrel with verdicts. It is our business to present evidence, theirs to consider it. I imagine we will try the Bain case. I do not know of any reason why we should not. It is a far stronger case than this."

Associate Counsel H. H. Appel of the defense declared that it was the nature of the evidence against Darrow that brought about the verdict of acquittal. "I have always felt," he said, "that no American juror would countenance a scheme to allow so many criminals to go free in order to convict a defendant."

Mr. Darrow said that he had intended to return to Chicago as soon as possible, but he was undecided at the present time.

Mrs. Darrow collected the autographs of the 12 jurors.

"They are 12 new friends," she said, "and I will keep them forever."

As soon as the verdict became known on the streets an American flag was displayed from the flagpole on the Labor temple.

Don't forget to attend the Big Sale at Rosenberg's. Everything going at Cost Price.

BILL LIMITING TERM OF PRESIDENT SIDETRACKED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The constitutional amendment, proposed by Senator Works, limiting the term of office of the president to a six-year term, was side-tracked in the senate today until Monday. The senate spent the great part of the day over the conference report on the Indiana appropriation bill.

Physicians Agree on Internal Baths

The most enlightened physicians, including many of the greatest specialists, are recommending and prescribing the use of the J. B. L. Cascade, Nature's own Cure for Constipation. It keeps the lower intestine sweet and clean and eliminates all poisons in the waste which it contains. Otherwise, these poisons are distributed throughout the body, this weakens the whole system, makes us dull and bilious, and even brings on serious complaints.

The J. B. L. Cascade clears the colon of all waste, and is shown by Max Kahn, state agent of Independence Bldg., phone Main 233. Ask or write for booklet, "Why Man of Today is Only 50 Per Cent Efficient." Mail orders for Cascade shipped promptly.

PRINCIPAL SEAPORTS SAFE FROM INVADERS

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—Its advance on San Francisco effectually checked by a determined stand by a force of the defending army, the invading "Red" army, in the "war game" was forced to camp tonight on the north side of the Sausalito river.

The battle of Sausalito, fought today, was the first big engagement of the mimic war being waged south of this city.

Col. W. H. C. Bowen, commanding 400 men, engaged the first division of the "Red" army, under the command of Brigadier General Wanokowski, in a narrow pass and though driven back after a fierce encounter, he accomplished his purpose of delaying the enemy's march.

NEWTOWN, Conn., Aug. 17.—New York tonight is still safe from the attack of the invaders who for a week have threatened its capture. The great battle of Newtown, fought today between the "Blue" defenders of the city and the attacking "Red" army proved indecisive, according to official announcement. With the failure of the "enemy" to break through the "Blue" lines, the maneuvers in which 20,000 regulars and volunteer soldiers were engaged came to an end.

SUICIDE BELIEVED TO SOLVE CARLEN MURDER

Body of Man Found in Denver Lodging House Bears Wounds That Indicate Hard Struggle

DENVER, Aug. 17.—In the discovery of the dead body of a man thought to be R. C. Ray of Vincent, Tex., the police, tonight, are inclined to the theory that the murderer of Miss Signea Carlen, in Montclair, last Friday night, has at last been discovered, through accident or deliberate suicide.

Ray's body was found lying on a bed in a Larimer street lodging house this afternoon, partially dressed, and with the gas jets in the room turned on. The coroner tonight pronounced death due to asphyxiation. When examined at the morgue tonight, scratches were found on the forehead, nose, breast and abdomen which resemble finger nail marks. The scratches were covered with scabs pronounced by physicians to be about a week old. Blood spots were found on the shirt and examination revealed that an attempt had been made to wash them off.

A most important clue in the opinion of the police is the fact that a sheet of music was found in the pocket of the coat worn by the man. Miss Carlen's music book was found scattered over the prairie with several sheets missing. The knife carried by Ray is spotted, whether with blood or something else remains to be determined. Miss Carlen was mutilated with a knife.

Ray was identified through letters found in his clothing. He was between 45 and 50 years old.

Believe Tainted Beef Bone Used in Making Soup Caused Deaths

ROCKY FORD, Colo., Aug. 17.—Local physicians, today, after a superficial examination of the bodies of the Rev. Gustav A. Latzke family, victims of poison, declared that, in their opinion, death was due to ptomaine, through tainted beef bone used in making soup. The funeral of the victims will be held tomorrow.

BOULDER, Colo., Aug. 17.—Dr. John Beckley, state chemist, to whom the stomachs of the victims of the Latzke poisoning, in Rocky Ford, were submitted for examination by Coroner T. B. Wilson of Otero county, today, declared, late tonight, that he had not yet completed the analysis of the contents of the stomachs, and could give no definite information, further than that death was due to poisoning, the character of which he had not yet determined. His report probably will be made to Coroner Wilson, tomorrow.

Brother of a Former Governor of Missouri Disappears From Home

Macmahudke, 63 years old, a retired business man of Denver, and formerly heavily interested in mining in the Georgetown district, has disappeared from his home in this city, and relatives and friends fear he is suffering from aberration. The police have been requested to assist in the search for him.

Macmahudke is a first cousin of ex-Governor Marmaduke of Missouri. Dr. Val Marmaduke of Pueblo, a brother, has been notified, and will arrive in Denver tomorrow to assist in the search.

Leading Merchants Entered in Window Trimming Contest

The carnival window trimming contest is attracting more attention and interest every day. It will be one of the features of the week.

Many unique and attractive ideas are being worked out by the merchants and window trimmers of the retail district and it is certain that the store fronts of Colorado Springs merchants will be worth inspection next week.

More than 50 representative firms already have entered the contest, and this number is expected to be materially increased this week.

Not only does the contest offer an excellent opportunity for carrying out the carnival spirit in window display, but it gives a splendid opportunity to attract the favorable attention of the thousands of visitors to the fact that Colorado Springs metropolitan stores are second to none in the west.

It is probable that the committee will divide the prizes among five classes: the dry goods stores, shoe dealers, clothing, jewelry, stationery and art goods dealers and general stores. Those who have, up to date, signified their intention of entering the contest are:

Is Struck By Switch Engine; Foot Cut Off

Suffering from the amputation of his left foot by a switch engine, Joe Meyers, aged 65, a trackman for the street railway company living at 25 West Cucharas street, lay on the Denver & Rio Grande right-of-way, between Ninth and Tenth streets, from 7:30 to 9 o'clock last night, calling loudly for help.

People living in that section of the city heard the cries, but were afraid to investigate, and, after an hour and a half, telephoned the police. The ambulance was sent, and Meyers was taken to St. Francis hospital.

Meyers was intoxicated and his story to Chief Burns is disconnected. He said he was walking along the track when a Colorado Midland engine struck him. He was found on the Rio Grande tracks, but, as the Midland right-of-way is only a few yards south of the Rio Grande it is possible that he crawled over to them after being struck.

Police Will Investigate Act Tourist Driver in Runaway—Woman Victim Improving

The condition of Miss Minnie McMurry of Carthage, Mo., a tourist who sustained a broken collarbone as a result of being thrown from a tourist carriage driven by John W. McClure when the horses ran away last Friday evening, was reported last night to be improving. She is at Glickner sanatorium.

Chief of Police Burns said last night that unless McClure can prove that he did not voluntarily jump from the carriage he will recommend that McClure's license be revoked. The matter will come before the council at the next meeting.

SERVING JURORS NO FUN, SAYS DEPUTY

Serving jurymen is not a pleasant task, according to Deputy Sheriff Charles Hobbs, especially when it is learned that a number of men on the panel have been dead several years.

Hobbs started out yesterday morning but when he discovered William F. Sherman, Fred Haven and F. L. Sherman were dead and that one of the men was a woman he dropped his search.

Chief Burns Seeks Strict Automobile Speed Law in City

Chief of Police Burns yesterday received a copy of the rules for the regulation of street traffic. It is contained in the ordinances of Los Angeles, Cal. and will try to prevail upon the city council to pass an ordinance like it.

The rules which Chief Burns is particularly desirous of having put in effect here are as follows:

It is unlawful to drive any vehicle at a greater rate of speed than 10 miles per hour over any street intersection (excepting the intersections in the business district) within the district in this section described: to drive any vehicle at a greater rate of speed than 12 miles per hour on any street in the said district except at intersections as before provided.

Then follows the boundaries of the district which, in Colorado Springs, would be the five limits:

It is unlawful to drive any vehicle at a greater rate of speed than 10 miles per hour over any street outside of the district above described. Penalties: first offense $25 to $100 fine or 10 to 30 days in jail, second offense in one year, fine of from $50 to $100 or from 30 to 100 days in jail, third offense, fine of from $100 to $200 or from 90 to 100 days in jail.

It is unlawful to drive any animal or vehicle over any street intersecting in the business district at a greater rate of speed than six miles per hour.

It is unlawful to drive any animal or vehicle at a greater rate of speed than 10 miles per hour over any street outside of the business district.

The crossings here given would correspond to the crossings in this city just outside of the business district.

Chief Burns is of the opinion that such rules as these would do away with practically all of the speeding in the city.

Under the present ordinance, says Burns, we can do nothing with speeders. They are brought into police court given a small fine and permitted to go, with instructions not to do it again. But what good does all this do? Any motorist who wants to speed in the city can get nothing for a small fine. However, if he could give some of these fellows a term in jail they would not be so anxious to tear down one street and up another at a speed of 60 miles an hour.

HERE TO INVESTIGATE DRY FARMING METHODS

H. L. Phillips of Johannesburg, South Africa, who has been studying in Canada for the last four years, arrived in this city yesterday and will remain for three or four days. He has been touring the western states most of the summer spending a great deal of time in Montana and Utah. He is investigating dry farming which is at present coming into large use in South Africa and will cover a good deal of Colorado to see its operation here. He will probably return to South Africa about October.

"Until the soil was dry," he said, "the big interest in South Africa was mining, but when agriculture has taken equal rank, it is just beginning to be of great importance, and dry farming is going to be a vast help in developing the country. The people are beginning to see the possibilities of scientific agriculture. With proper methods there we can grow anything from the hardiest apples up to tropical products. A little to the north part of the country and at an altitude of about 1000 feet is excellent territory for many of these products, cotton especially."

The two couples will take a wedding journey together through Colorado, and Mr. and Mrs. Cartwright will then go to their home in Los Angeles, while Mr. and Mrs. Clausen will live in Omaha, Neb.

The Burns Offers the Summer Season's Best Card in Cohan's Musical Success-- "The Talk of New York"

WALTER RICHARDSON, THE YOUNG ROMANTIC ACTOR, WHO SUCCEEDS MALCOLM DUNCAN AS LEADING MAN AT THE BURNS THEATER, OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT IN GEORGE COHAN'S MUSICAL COMEDY, "THE TALK OF NEW YORK."

The most pretentious effort of the present summer season at the Burns theater comes the advent of George Cohan's best musical comedy, "The Talk of New York," tomorrow night, and for the week.

Walter Richardson in the role of Kid Burns, supported by the entire Burns company, and a chorus of 16 trained singers, is sure to make a pronounced impression of the most favorable kind, and if careful preparation is an early basis of production, then the new playhouse, although commodious, will be none too large for the crowds which are certain to flock to enjoy a musical show possessing so much merit.

As a sequel to the story of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," "The Talk of New York" would serve a worthy purpose, so far as amusement matters go, but the play is more ably handled, and is filled to the limit with music and song. It was especially written for Victor Moore, who was a "pal" of George Cohan, and from the orchestra, in keeping with the other improved features for "The Talk," will hold space.

A partial list of some of the numbers are given: "Put a Bet Down for Me," "Mr. Burns of New Rochelle," "I Want the World to Know I Love You," "Under Any Old Flag at All," "Gee, Ain't I Glad I'm Home," "When a Fellow's on the Level With a Girl That's on the Square."

GODSPEED, MALCOLM DUNCAN

With last night's performance of "A Gilded Fool," Mr. Malcolm Duncan closed his engagement at the Burns theater, and the remarkable audience of the past week clearly demonstrated in what esteem he was held.

Mr. Duncan was not altogether a stranger to the theatergoers in Colorado Springs when he came, having appeared in the city with Mrs. Fiske the past season as her leading man, but he leaves enriched by friends who will

Mary Stuart, Queen of Scotland, while stilling in the country, meets a young minstrel, scantily clad and starting to death. The young man is repulsed by Darnley, the Queen's husband, but Mary Stuart protects him. She orders that he be taken to the castle kitchen and sees that he is well treated.

Taking music, the queen becomes interested in the young singer and takes him as her foster. Little by little, Rizzio becomes the Queen's favorite. He is very arrogant with the Scotch nobles, men who become jealous of the favor granted him, and swear revenge.

Darnley tries to break the pride of the favorite, but is unsuccessful. The nobles then decide on a plan to revenge themselves on Rizzio. They take Darnley who is under the influence of liquor from a place of pleasure to the Queen's chamber. Mary Stuart is listening to her favorite music and is very near the singer. Darnley breaks into the room, has Rizzio taken out, in spite of the Queen's pro-at the New Century theater, New York.

Because of the beautiful scenic effects of the stage production, Mr. Read proposed to Liebler & Co. that he be allowed to make a picture version of the play, but the price asked by the owners was prohibitive, so he decided to make a picture of the garden itself. Journeying from Paris by automobile, Mr. Read has produced a motion picture of the trip and a most delightful production it is. Three reels of film were required to record the interesting scenes of the journey, during which there is scarcely a dull moment.

Through the cooperation of Mr. George Tyler of the Liebler company, Mr. Read followed the same route and used the same guides who assisted Mr. Tyler when he made the trip two years previous with his corps of assistants to secure material for the staging of the play. Many of the scenes in the picture are similar to the stage production and are beautiful to the last degree. In addition to these Mr. Read has given views of the region and the people who live there which could not have been produced in the play. There are scenes from villages along the route showing the habits and customs of the peculiar people of that country. Many native dances are shown, of which the dance of the Howling Dervishes is intensely interesting and which shows the dancers thrusting daggers through their cheeks and turning themselves with fire. Other interesting ceremonial dances are the Triumph dance of the Soudanese and the dance of the Coted Nalls women.

The scenes in the Garden of Allah are extremely beautiful and show the splendor of the place to better effect than is shown in the play. Many of the characters depicted in the play are presented in the pictures, namely, the flute player and the old sand diver.

It is impossible to describe all the beauties of this splendid picture; they must be seen to be fully appreciated, and there will be no difficulty in appreciating them because the photography is so clear and sharp as to make each object stand out in perfect detail.

While mentioning the excellence of the pictures something should be said of the difficulty with which they were secured. In this region foreigners are looked upon with suspicion. Many are religiously opposed to being photographed and it was only by the exercise of rarest diplomacy and the distribution of liberal backsheesh that the more intimate pictures of native ceremonies were obtained. Mr. Read is to be complimented upon the success of his venture, for it places him among the foremost of the picture explorers.

Educationally this subject has a high value as illustrative of the habits and customs of an almost unknown people and a region but little explored. It is certain to arouse the keenest interest among the critical and discerning public.

In addition to these three reels, "The Christian Martyrs," a hand-colored Gaiety, will be shown, and following on Wednesday and Thursday, Mr. Bernard Noon, who has recently returned from Panama with a complete set of films and slides, will illustrate and lecture on this greatest of engineering feats. On Friday and Saturday, a return engagement of the Johnson-Lynch fight pictures, and the price is only 10 cents.

Don't forget to attend the Big Sale at Rosenbergs. Everything going at Cost Price.

MEXICAN IS ACCUSED OF IMPROPER CONDUCT

Pedro Jose Lopez, a Mexican sheepherder, was arrested near Crows Nest, about 30 miles east of Colorado Springs, yesterday by Deputy Sheriffs Hobbs and Birdsell, and was brought to the county jail, where he will be held for investigation of his conduct in the presence of Mrs. Hunsdoerfer, wife of Frank W. Hunsdoerfer, a local street car conductor, living at 224 East Fountain street, and who, with her three children, is spending the summer on her farm near Crows Nest.

According to the story told by Mrs. Hunsdoerfer, Lopez, who is employed by the El Paso Sheep company, called at the farmhouse yesterday and asked Mrs. Hunsdoerfer if the children were away. Receiving an answer in the affirmative he began talking to her in an insulting manner, and she, becoming frightened, ran for about a mile to a neighbor's home and telephoned the sheriff's office here. Meanwhile the Mexican left, and when Hobbs and Birdsell arrived a couple of hours later, he was herding his sheep.

Mrs. Hunsdoerfer says that Lopez has been herding his sheep close to the house for some time, and that on several occasions she has told him to move further away. She has been frightened by his actions at various times, and his call yesterday morning did not come as a complete surprise.

PRESIDENT DETERMINED TO BRING CONGRESS TO TERMS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Taft told callers today he intended to fight congress for the retention of the commerce court, if it kept him in Washington all summer. He declared he would again veto the legislative, executive and judicial bill, if it was returned to him containing the provision to abolish the court.

Mr. Taft was aroused over reports that Democratic house leaders planned to retaliate for his veto by refusing appropriations for the counselor for the state department, the bureau of trade relations and other adjuncts of the department which the president considered of immense importance to interests to be gained in foreign trade. Two Republican senators, Smoot and Sanders, assured the president that the senate might pass the bill as reported to the house yesterday, but they were confident it would not pass over a second veto. Those who talked with the president in the White house offices today quoted him as saying he could listen to no offers of compromise in the bill and must do his duty as he saw it.

Mutton is not much liked in Amsterdam. It is said that at the present rate of increase the horses slaughtered at the municipal abattoir will soon outnumber the sheep. Last year's figures were 2,298 sheep and 6,216 horses. Pork is evidently liked best, as the number of hogs slaughtered was 69,335, against 27,350 beefs and 33,341 calves.

tract, "The Talk of New York" was a record-breaker in every city in which an attraction appeared.

Mr. Richardson has played Kid Burns in "Forty-five Minutes" and "The Talk" over 50 times, and his rendition of the role was said to equal that of Victor Moore, and by some able critics he is pronounced even more pleasing.

The orchestra has been augmented especially for the week, and Professor total into the thousands. As an actor, Mr. Duncan is magnetic and exceedingly artistic, as a man, he is endeared to those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance and confidence. Should Mr. Duncan return to Colorado Springs, it will be in the nature of a visit from a friend, and a hearty welcome awaits him.

"DORA THORNE" THE REAL FEATURE AT THE MAJESTIC MONDAY

Dora Thorne, the best of Charlotte M. Braem's books, has been filmed just in the way that Mrs. Braem wrote it. The popularity of Dora Thorne as a novel is unquestioned and has appealed to the readers of America at all times; it has had more readers and its popularity is almost as great today as the day it was written. The story is just jammed with human interest, the trouble love story of Dora, the bookkeeper's daughter, and Lord Roland, reaches every heart. It was produced by a capital company and directed by one of the most expert stage directors in America.

Also Richard, a favorite of Mrs. Stuart, played the part of a short in some of the story features.

The Savoy theater is presenting the biggest week of features ever attempted in this city. Monday and Tuesday "The Garden of Allah," a brand new film of three reels, will be shown for the first time in the state of Colorado.

The Garden of Allah is a definite place, situated in the desert of Sahara near the city of Biskra, south of Algiers. It is owned by Count London, who bought from the French government the right to improve some two acres of the desert sands and there constructed a wonderful garden, said to be the most beautiful in the world. It is of this Garden of Allah that Dora Thorne wrote, the famous story of the same name, since dramatized by

A CHEERFUL "SKY PILOT" IN RANGOON

This good-natured gentleman is one of the ornaments at the entrance to a shrine near the Golden Pagoda in Rangoon. There are hundreds of these shrines grouped around the base of the great pagoda, for it has long been the custom for Burmese who were both pious and wealthy to erect shrines for pilgrims.

The location of this statue and the pose of the left hand seem to indicate that the man is inviting visitors to enter this particular shrine. To the Western eye, however, he looks exactly like a drunken person supporting himself at the corner lamp-post.

So far as cheerfulness is concerned, that and nonchalance seem to be the keynote of the Burmese. The utmost confusion prevails around the central shrines but it does not appear to disturb those who kneel to pray. They seem to be devout worshippers but they do not hesitate to let their eyes roam about in the process of their devotions. It is an ordinary sight to see a Burmese woman or girl at prayer with a cigar or a piece of cheroot in her mouth—for the Burmese women smoke habitually, just like the men. The picture was taken by a World Tourist on the S. S. Cleveland.

CURES INSANITY BY USE BRAIN ESSENCE

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 17.—An alchemy more wonderful by far than that of the ancients who searched for the philosopher's stone, was revealed before a section of the British Medical association by Dr. William Maule Smith. The title of his paper was remarkable enough—"On the use of extract of brain tissue in the treatment of various forms of insanity."

In a paper bristling with technicalities he quoted actual cases in which he had obtained healthy brain tissue, extracted the cerebrin and cholesterin, and injected these substances into insane persons. This treatment, he declared, caused delusions to vanish and grave disorders were cleared up.

It is difficult to put into words the sensation which this paper has made even in this scientific gathering. Dr. Maule Smith, the celebrated Dutch orthopedist, declared that both curvature of the spine and our natural right-handedness dated from that remote time when man began to walk upright instead of on all fours. He recommended that to avoid curvature children should not be allowed to sit up until they could stand and walk.

Crawling to Cure Curvature. Mr. Maule Smith went even further and exhibited lantern slides, showing a young man crawling on all fours to cure curvature.

Sea sickness and train sickness came under the wide purview of ophthalmological section, and Dr. Bradbourne attributed them to the effect of the eyes to overcome the unaccustomed motion which they saw. He recommended that sufferers should sit with their backs to the engine.

Of course, children's sweets were attacked. No congress of the British Medical association would be complete without a fierce onslaught on the brandyball of boyhood, the puerile peppermint, and the adolescent acid drops.

Dr. Sam Wallace, lecturer in dental surgery and pathology at the London hospital, mentioned two great causes of dental disease—one the "happy nature of the food on which very young children are compelled to subsist," and the other sweets. He quoted the medical officer of health for Salop for the statement that "the eating of sweets is responsible for 50 per cent of the disease in the teeth of children of the present day."

Martianus boasts of 15 sugar factories of which five also turn out rum. The exports of sugar in 1910 were valued at $3,145,515. The rum exports were valued at $1,412,525.

NEW CHAMPION STEER ROPER IS ARRESTED

Frank Meish, Who Became Cowboy Idol at Frontier Show, Charged With Horse Stealing

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 17.—In the hour of his triumph, Frank Meish, who became a cowboy idol when he established a new world's record for roping a steer, was arrested for an offense which the cowboy most condemns, horse stealing.

The man whom thousands cheered at Frontier park is an inmate of the county jail, held on an Oklahoma warrant, charging the theft of one sorrel horse from Miller brothers, proprietors of the famous "101" ranch and makers of the more famous "101" moving pictures.

The warrant was brought to Cheyenne by Zack Miller, one of the brothers, and would not have been served on Meish, whose name was spelled "Maish" in Oklahoma, until the close of the Frontier celebration had not Miller received a tip this evening that Meish intended to disappear last night.

Miller immediately called on the sheriff to serve the warrant and Meish was taken into custody by Deputy Sheriff Toet at Frontier headquarters. The arrest was performed so quietly that only one or two persons present suspected what had happened.

Seen at the sheriff's office, Meish admitted that he had sold a horse owned by Miller Bros., by whom he was employed at Bliss, Okla., that he had intended to pay them the purchase price, but had neglected to do so. Miller says he recognized Meish on the opening day of the Frontier celebration and that Meish recognized him and volunteered the statement that he wanted to pay him for "that horse." The matter was taken up with Meish's employer, C. B. Lewis, Miller said, but no payment for the horse was forthcoming.

"I let him go on with the show," said Miller, "because I didn't want to interfere with the fun, but when the steer roping was called off tonight and I got a tip that he was going to light out I beat him to it."

"Can Meish fix matters by paying you for the horse and your trouble?" was asked.

"He cannot—he's going back to Oklahoma to explain," was the emphatic reply. Meish last night declined to sign a waiver of his rights not to return to Oklahoma unless extradited.

"We'll attend to that," said Miller. "Extradition papers will be here just as fast as the mail can bring them."

Whether Meish will fight extradition appears uncertain.

ANCIENT PROPOSAL CUSTOMS

GENEVA, Aug. 17.—In remote Alpine villages, especially in the Bernese Oberland, there still exist ancient and pretty customs of proposing marriage by the language of flowers.

If a maid accepts a bouquet of edelweiss from a man she at the same time accepts him as her fiance, the idea being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves, though, of course, a bunch of edelweiss is not very expensive.

Another method, which also exists in the Canton of Glarus is for the young man to place a flower pot containing a single rose and a note on the window sill of the girl's room, when she is absent from home, and wait—perhaps days—for a reply.

If the maid takes the rose, the young man boldly enters the house to arrange matters with her parents, but if the rose is allowed to fade away, the proposal is rejected without a single word having been exchanged between the couple.

Sometimes a little girl will keep a man waiting a day or two for an answer, but whatever it may be, it is considered final.

LEGG DEFENDING TITLE

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 17.—Billed against H. C. Legg, Minneapolis, for the last three years winner of the Trans-Mississippi tournament, and twice preceding that runner up, W. D. Middleton, Davenport, Ia., today is attempting to win the championship playing over the champion's own course, that of the Minnikahda club. Legg is the favorite and it is predicted by veterans that it will not be necessary for the match to go the entire 36 holes. Because of heavy rain yesterday and last night it is not likely that Legg's medal of yesterday morning, '70, the record for the course, will be repeated today.

BABY LOVES HIS BATH

CUTICURA SOAP

No other keeps the skin and scalp so clean and clear, so sweet and healthy. Used with Cuticura Ointment, it soothes irritations which often prevent sleep and if neglected, become chronic disfigurements. Millions of mothers use these pure, sweet and gentle emollients for every purpose of the toilet, bath and nursery.

the premier said: "You understand perfectly that our men have a natural desire for revenge, and that it is most difficult to restrain them. The situation is, therefore, serious, and if we do not have full satisfaction from Turkey, it may become insurmountable."

A few days ago, King Nicholas addressed the troops collected at Podgoritz for the maneuvers, and warned them inconspicuously: "I do not want the peace disturbed this year."

This desire the Gospodar traced to anxiety to save Italy from being suspected of intriguing in the Balkans through the agency of Montenegro.

The situation was rendered more difficult by the fact that the Montenegrins were slain in home territory, only one Montenegrin having previously violated the frontier, and that the bodies of the slain were mutilated by the Turks.

FAMOUS MISSIONARY DIES

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Dr. Griffith John, the famous missionary, is dead in London.

Dr. Griffith John, who was born in 1831, worked for many years in China, returning to England only this year on account of his health. When Dr. John went out to China 16 years ago he found Hankow, where he was stationed, in ruins after the Taiping rebellion. He left it in the same condition after the recent revolution.

During his 36 years' service he had only been home on furling twice, and altogether he had only been five years away from China.

In 1880, the Congressional Union of England and Wales urged him to accept its chairmanship, but he refused to leave his work in China.

DIPLOMATS ANXIOUSLY WATCHING MONTENEGRO

By FREDERICK WERNER.

BERLIN, Aug. 17.—Insignificant though the little kingdom of Montenegro is, the eyes of the diplomats of the great powers have been anxiously watching events at Cetinje and there has been considerable fear lest the war-loving mountaineers should take advantage of the moment and swoop down upon their arch-enemies, the Turks, thus giving the impulse to the much-dreaded great European war.

General Martinovitch, the prime minister of Montenegro, in a recent interview, however, has done much to allay any such fears, through his assurances contained rather too many "ifs."

The general agreed that the situation on the frontier was critical, but said that Montenegro would do everything in her power for the maintenance of peace. At present, Scutari was quiet, but he was unable to predict how long it would remain so. Should the Mallesors join the revolution, the position of Montenegro would, the premier said, become exceedingly difficult.

Referring to the Turco-Montenegrin incident on the banks of the Zeta, in which nine Montenegrins were killed,

OLD HOUSE WHERE MARAT MET DEATH TORN DOWN

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Aug. 17.—An old house forming part of a block of buildings at the corner of the Boulevard Saint Germain, and the ancient Rue des Cordeliers, of which little has been said in recent years, but which seemed with revolutionary reminiscences, has been pulled down. It was the house in which Marat and Danton had flats in the most stirring days of the Terror, and it was there that Marat was stabbed to death by Charlotte Corday as he was in his bath. The ground floor was used as a printing office, and it was there that Marat's paper, the Ami du Peuple, was printed.

The house was old, even in Marat's day it bore the number 87 of the Boulevard Saint Germain, and was the last home of the Rue des Cordeliers at the time when the fortifications of Philippe Auguste still existed, it adjoined the fortifications, and its walls faced the old gate of the Cordeliers, which had been opened up in 1538. It originally belonged to the Abbe Rance, who bequeathed it to the Hotel-Dieu before he retired to the monastery of La Trappe.

When the Boulevard Saint Germain was extended the name of the old gate was changed, and it was called for a while the Porte Saint Germain.

The Financiers Minor, who afterwards became known as the Cordeliers, had owned the ground, and their convent, in fact, still existed near by at the corner of the Rue de la Harpe.

When the Cordeliers saw that Legrande founded the club of the Cordeliers in their empty convent, and he and his

SEVERAL CHANGES OF HIGH ARMY OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Brigadier General William Crozier, U. S. A., chief of the bureau of ordnance, has been selected to succeed Brigadier General A. L. Mills as president of the army war college in this city. General Mills becomes chief of the division of militia affairs, relieving Brigadier General R. K. Evans, assigned to command the department of the Gulf, recently commanded by Brigadier General Witherspoon, now in nomination before the senate to be major general. Brigadier General R. Z. Steever, temporarily in command of the department of Texas, succeeding the late Brigadier General Duncan, is made commander of that division.

It is estimated that the original supply of coal in the south and west, 57,505 square miles of its territory was 332,435,000,000 tons.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make-up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate mechanism which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or but flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

Mrs. G. H. Williams, of Lynchburg, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle when I found it had done me good. I took all five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I write all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It is the only medicine on earth."

Dear Doc—
You heard what these properties sold for at auction today and you thought them cheap, didn't you? Well, I've just had a tip on a better bargain than any of them. It's in a select neighborhood, not too far out, has a large, nicely-improved lot and a stable. The house is on good lines, is well-built, has a central hall and five rooms on the first floor (just right for a doctor), with seven sleeping rooms, a splendid sleeping porch and three baths. I'll wager the lot and the house would cost over $20,000. The owner does not live here any more and is anxious to sell, and I have it straight that a little more than half that figure would be considered. Why don't you look at it? Were I going to stay here and continue in practice, I think I would buy it myself.

Yours as ever,

GOOD NEWS
 POLITICAL news of the most encouraging character is coming in from all parts of the State. It is this: The people of Colorado are aroused; they intend to smash the old-time political machine; they are going to begin the smashing process in the primaries on September 10.
 When Stewart, Vincent and Griffith went through the Arkansas Valley a couple of weeks ago they found the sentiment of the people to be overwhelmingly progressive. When they visited the north-eastern section of the State they found the same condition of things to exist.
 Reports from various sections of the Western Slope state that that section of Colorado is so progressive that the people are not arguing whether they shall smash the machine; they are merely discussing ways and means of doing their smashing most effectively. It has been generally decided by Republicans of that section that they will make their fight for clean government as Progressive Republicans in the September primaries. The editorial position of the Grand Junction News is indicative of the sentiment on the Western Slope.
 In Denver there is no daily newspaper, except Speer's Denver Times, that is supporting the assembly nominees of the Democratic or Republican parties. The Times, whose own political motives makes it suspicious of the motives of others, says this:
 "Well, the petitions of the thousand and one ambitious state-savers of Colorado, who want this or that nomination at the primaries in September, are all in. There are all the fifty-seven varieties of candidates to which the present period of general political rash has given birth. Democrats and Republicans Progressives and Platformists, Simon-Pures and Dyed-in-the-Wools, Standpaters and Reformers, all will be there when it comes time to vote, and all for the same purpose—the jobs."
 Well, to him who evil thinks!
 The old caucus and convention system was nothing but an effective method of chloroforming public sentiment. Under that system the reform of either of the old parties was impossible. Voters have come to realize that the new direct primary law offers them a method of nominating the men that they want. It is in consequence of this opportunity for a free and honest expression of opinion that the Stewart fight "inside the party" outside the machine" is gaining new adherents daily.
 The people of Colorado are aroused; they are fighting mad. For years they have felt the domination that public service corporations of this State have exercised over the political parties of the State and hence over legislation. To-day, the voters are determined to redeem Colorado from the baleful effects of legislation enacted for the benefit of the few as against the welfare of the many. The evidence of this determination is visible everywhere. The people of Colorado are aroused, they are fighting mad.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS—A DEFENSE
 AN article recently published in this column contained this sentence: "The public schools in the North, as in the South, fail to educate the pupils thoroughly and efficiently."
 A writer in the Open Parliament quotes this statement and uses it as the basis for the following indictment against the public school system of the United States.
 "A universal state educational system, so far from promoting republican institutions, tends to destroy them. Individuality of thought and action is indispensable in this form of government. The public schools mould the people in one mould."
 The Gazette takes the stand that if public schools have failed to give an efficient education, private schools have failed even more dismally. Moreover, there is nothing inherent in a public education that requires public schools who "mould the people in one mould." In addition, it is the contention of this paper that the firmest basis for republican institutions is a thoroughly educated electorate, and that such an electorate can only be secured by a universal state educational system.

 It is hard to see how anyone familiar with the educational systems of the various countries of the world can consistently oppose a public school system. Germany has a public school system from kindergarten to university, and Germany is the country to which educators and students make pilgrimages from all parts of the world. Her percentage of illiteracy is 0.03. On the other hand, those countries giving little attention to public education have a high percentage of illiteracy. For instance, Spain's percentage is 58.7.
 The course of development of education in the United States has been from private institutions of learning operated for profit, to endowed institutions getting the major portion of their funds from gifts and the minor portion from tuition fees, to institutions operated entirely or almost entirely at public expense.
 In 1910 the number of pupils enrolled in public schools and colleges of the United States was over 18,000,000; the number in private and endowed schools of all kinds was 2,000,000. There is evidence to show that, for the average student, the facilities offered all along the line by public schools are superior to those offered by private schools.
 Private universities have almost disappeared, due to the competition of endowed and public institutions offering a superior grade of instruction. Valparaiso University of Valparaiso, Ind., is one of the few examples of a university run for profit. Endowed institutions, like Harvard, Yale and Colorado College, and state institutions, like those of Michigan, Wisconsin, California and Colorado, are today offering a general education that is not equaled by any institution in the United States that is run for profit.

FROM OTHER PENS
THE DEAD EMPEROR OF JAPAN.
 From the Kansas City Times.
 The mikado, who died yesterday, was the first emperor of Japan whose death, or life, was of more than curious or cultural interest to the world.
 Japan was the first of those nations outside of the Caucasian pale which of late have responded astonishingly to the world spirit of progress. Turkey in its Young Turk movement and China in its democratic changes have more lately, and with less certain footsteps, followed the lead of the mikado's land.
 The only European country which has approached Japan in changing a regime place among the world powers is Germany. Within the period of the reign of Mutsuhito, the German empire has been born and the tremendous industrial and political development of Germany has taken place. But Germany has merely concentrated into one national life a group of states already in the front rank of thought and achievement; while Japan has changed marvelously its customs, almost one might say its spiritual habit, along with its politics and its mechanic arts.
 There is a parallel, nevertheless, between the first mikado of Japan as a world power and the first emperor of Germany. Seemingly to dominate William, yet really under him, were the great master captains, Bismarck, Von Moltke and the lesser ones. Under Mutsuhito were Ito and Oyama and the others. Yet, the Kaiser and the mikado gave the cohesive force of great personalities, enlivening affection and national feeling which the great captains might not have enlisted.
 Japan, under the form of an almost autocratic government, or at least of an oligarchy, has made great strides in real progressivism. It is up with the occidental pessimism of the nineteenth century. It may or may not denote progressivism. But in the ways of peace, and especially in its assimilation of democratic ideals, beneath its traditional formulas, Japan is in the full swing of the twentieth century. In the firm clutch of what we of a different civilization are pleased to call the western spirit.
 The dead mikado was a potent figure in that wonderful advance.

A SHIP FOR BRAZIL.
 From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.
 There sailed from Philadelphia on Friday last a steamship carrying a cargo of general merchandise for Brazil. It was a vessel of imposing dimensions, for it was big enough to hold 23 locomotives with their tenders, 36 steel cars, and an immense quantity of steel rails and accessories, the rails alone weighing 1,200 tons.
 The remarkable fact about the consignment was that over the vessel that bore it floated the stars and stripes, and this shipment from Philadelphia is said to be the first departure of a steamship under the American flag, and bound for South America, that this port has witnessed in half a century and possibly longer.
 It is hoped this sailing means the beginning of a new era in our trade relations with South America. We still know very little of our sister republics south of the equator, and not much about those to the northward. Many persons realize that Brazil alone covers an area equal to the whole of the United States plus a third of Alaska. The Pan-American Union is doing what it can to dispel the shades of our profound and rather shameful ignorance. The establishment of a strong mercantile marine in the carrying business between our ports and those of the Latin republics will do still more. The Brazilian government in a year spends about $175,000,000, and her foreign debt is $440,000,000. The Argentine republic spends $110,000,000; the debt is almost exactly that of Brazil; the sum of $90,000,000 is invested in the railways. Chile spends $75,000,000, and her external debt is about $120,000,000. The imports of the Argentine republic in 1910 were worth $311,217,538; those of Brazil were valued at $258,574,837; those of Chile came to $108,582,273—of which a enormous trade it is obviously worth an extraordinary effort to secure our share. We shall not get it unless, in the parlance of the day, we "go after it." The departure of the steamship Corral from Philadelphia is an encouraging embassage—an embassage fraught not merely with locomotives and steel rails, but with promise for the future.

OPEN PARLIAMENT
IN DEFENSE OF THE COLLEGE TRUSTEES.
 To the Editor of The Gazette:
 I noticed in the Open Parliament of August 17 a criticism of the administrative officers of Colorado College for not keeping the college buildings open to visitors during the summer and for failure to properly advertise the institution to the many tourists who come here at this time of the year.
 Permit me to say that the college is open daily to visitors. Officers of the institution will be found in the general offices in Palmer hall every morning from 9 to 12, and they are always glad to show visitors about the buildings.
 The museum is open daily, except Saturday and Sunday, from 9 to 5 in the afternoon, and on Saturday from 9 to 12, and there is always a student in attendance to show visitors about. The Coburn library is open daily from 9 to 1, and from 3 to 5.
 It is true that the college does not advertise regularly in the daily papers, but the institution is given prominence in two different places in the Daily News, the official guide book of the town where visitors are told that the college is one of the institutions they ought to see while here. The college maintained summer lecture courses, which met daily during the month of July, and the lectures received almost daily mention in the papers.
 Inasmuch as the letter referred to was written by "A Friend of Colorado College" the spirit of interest which prompted its writing is not unappreciated, but the letter does not seem to have been fully informed as to the facts in the case.

SEVEN FAMOUS DISCOVERIES
NO. 1—THE MARINER'S COMPASS
 No one has ever been able to exactly specify at what period the property of the magnet was first discovered. It has been ascertained, however, with certainty, that mankind was familiar with it at a very early period. Father Kircher made a considerable effort to prove that the Hebrews were acquainted with the magnet's singular property of attracting iron and we learn from the ancient writer, Plutarch, but the Egyptians were not ignorant of it.
 Many of the ancient philosophers knew and admired the wonderful property of the magnet. Thales and Anaxagoras were so struck with it as to imagine that it had a soul. Plato affirmed that the cause of its attraction was divine. But, in spite of their knowledge of the magnet, its direct property was not known to the ancients.
 To the simple application of this property, which was either discovered or introduced into Europe about six centuries ago, mankind is indebted principally for the discovery of a new continent, for an extensive commerce between the most distant nations, and for an accurate knowledge of the shape and size of the world we inhabit.
 The use of the magnet needle was not known in Europe before the middle of the Thirteenth century, and the honor of its discovery has been much contested. But by the consent of most writers, it seems to belong to Flavio Gioia, of Amalfi, an ancient commercial city of Naples. He lived in the reign of Charles of Anjou, who died in 1280; and it was in compliment of this sovereign that Gioia distinguished the North pole by a fleur-de-lis.
 The Chinese ascribe the invention of the compass to their emperor, Haong-Ti, who, they say was a grandson of Noah. Some of them, however, refer the invention of it to a later date, B. C. Du Halde, in his "History of China," speaking of the Emperor Ching-Ti, when he gave battle to Tchou You, says:
 "He perceived that thick fogs saved the army from pursuit, and the soldiers rambled out of the way and lost the course of the wind, whereupon they made a car which showed them the four cardinal points. By this method he overtook Tchou You, made him prisoner and put him to death. Some say there were engraved in this car, on a plate, the characters of a rat and a horse, and underneath was placed a needle to determine the four parts of the world."
 This would demonstrate that the use of the compass, or something very near it, was of great antiquity and well attested.
 In another part of the book Du Halde says: "After they had their audience of leave, in order to return to their country, Tchou Kong gave them an instrument, which, on one side, pointed towards the north, and to direct them better on their way on the opposite side towards the south, than they had been directed in coming to China. The instrument was called 'Tchou Nan,' which is the same name by which the Chinese now call the sea compass. This has given occasion to think that Tchou Kong was the inventor of the compass."
 This circumstance happened in the Twelfth century, about 1,040 years before Christ. But notwithstanding the assertions of Du Halde, Repundot adduces strong reasons against the mariner's compass having been known among the ancient people of China and of Arabia.
 The French people have laid claim to the discovery of the mariner's compass, and at the Royal library at Paris there is a poem, contained in a curious quarto manuscript of the Thirteenth century, on vellum, in which the mariner's compass is mentioned. But in spite of all this, it is evident that the Neapolitan, Flavio Gioia, is not the original discoverer, was at least the first who used the mariner's compass, or compass, as it is now called, on vessels in the Mediterranean.

 By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

The American Canoe association, which is the oldest in the world, will hold its thirty-second annual meet between August 9 and 23 at its camp on Sugar island in the St. Lawrence river, which is easily accessible both to the Canadian and American members. The Canadian station is Ganouque and the Americans ship their supplies to Clayton, N. Y. The Canoe association launch, the "Rob Roy," as well as several other small vessels, ply between the two stations several times daily. This annual meet is an affair of importance to everyone interested in canoeing and attracts many summer visitors to points along the St. Lawrence. It always is held in August and there are members who have not missed a meet for 20 years or more. There are races by day and by moonlight. The canoes are gaily decorated and the affair is one grand fiesta.
 There are few summer camps so well adapted to their purpose as Sugar island, which contains everything likely to promote the comfort of the canoeists. There are general headquarters, a large mess and a store at which most of the things needed in canoeing may be purchased. Many canoeists, however, prefer to ship in their own supplies and special transportation facilities are provided. The visitors have their choice between providing their own food and cooking it in camp style, or taking their meals at the main mess. The island is irregular in shape, providing many little bays and shelters along its coast. Along this many of the clubs belonging to the association have established permanent posts to which they return each year. Camp sites are awarded to applicants each season in a methodical manner and each year adds to the comfort and conveniences available.
American Canoe Association, Leader.
 The American Canoe association has done more than any other organization in the world to popularize canoeing. Its founders and early members were men of exceptional ability and standing and they lent a prestige to the sport from the beginning. Their ingenuity has devised thousands of conveniences and improvements to the canoeing sport, which have been given to the world, in most cases gratuitously. For years the organization published annual guides giving instruction to amateur canoeists regarding the different types of canoes and the advantages and methods of handling each. They have supplied maps and descriptions of canoeing routes in all parts of the country and

Credit Due Scottish Officer.
 The credit of organizing canoeism, a sport belongs to John McGregor, officer in a Scottish regiment, who received an injury in a railroad accident which prevented his enjoyment of a hunting trip. He devised the famous Rob Roy canoe, which was built with a deck of cedar. It was equipped with a paddle, with a blade at both ends and also with a lug sail and a rudder. It was 15 feet long, 28 inches wide, 18 inches deep and weighed 50 pounds. The only baggage carried for a month's cruise was contained in a bag, a foot square and six inches high. In this canoe Mr. McGregor wandered about the small streams of central Europe, giving instruction in canoeing. He was killed in 1867.
 Baden-Powell took up canoeing when he appeared in this work, having built for him a canoe after the Rob Roy pattern. After using it for a while, he became interested in sailing and decided that a canoe could be used for sailing purposes which would retain good paddling qualities. A canoe known as the Nautilus was the result of this idea.
 Mr. Alden of New York became interested in canoeing about this time and succeeded in obtaining drawing Mr. Baden-Powell's canoe, from which was built a small fleet of boats for New York Canoe club, which is said to be the oldest club in the world. It built a substantial club house in 1881 and held its first regatta the same year. At this regatta it was rumored that every canoe on sail upon. This naturally threw cold water upon sailing, a time, although since then the sail is better understood. The power of a boat is governed largely the amount of water it draws. Consequently the shallow canoe which floats upon the top of the water, only sail "down the wind," for he in any other direction it would be helplessly. The American Indians understood this principle and often would place a bush in the bow of his canoe and stir it up. If a canoe was started before the wind, good speed would result without the paddle. The weight of the bush in the water, bringing the bush well in play. The canoe would change its course since it turns up stern as on a pivot and the wind is the sail directly in front of the pivot giving the greatest resistance to progress. Some Sea Island savages, in their canoes a rug woven out grasses which they utilize as a when desired.

New York Theatrical Letter

By EMORY CALVERT.

TIME, PLACE AND THE GIRL AT THE OPERA HOUSE THIS WEEK

SCENE FROM "THE TIME, THE PLACE AND THE GIRL," THE MORT H. SINGER MUSICAL COMEDY, WHICH JAMES HAWLEY AND PLAYERS WILL OFFER THIS WEEK WITH 50 PEOPLE IN THE CAST. THIS WILL BE ITS FIRST PRESENTATION IN THE WEST BY ANY STOCK COMPANY. AN ELABORATE PRODUCTION WILL BE PRESENTED.

Opening tomorrow evening and running the entire week with a special matinee Friday, G. M. Fought offers James Hawley and Garrick Players in the greatest of musical comedies, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," for the first time as a stock production in the entire west.

This place was seen here three seasons ago at a $2.00 scale of prices, with Johnny Young in the cast. Young was seen here this spring with "The Pink Lady." "The Time, the Place and the Girl" had the longest run Chicago has ever known and in New York it ran two entire seasons. Its music has been sung and played everywhere.

A dramatic stock organization was never more suited for playing this musical comedy than that of the Hawley players. The management has been trying all season to get it released for one week's production here and at last his efforts will be realized. One of the highest royalties ever paid by any stock company in this city will be paid Mort H. Singer for this piece.

The advance sale of seats for this week is the largest in the history of summer stock at the Grand opera house. With no advance in prices over the regular scale, this production being the biggest undertaking in many seasons, the Opera house will be packed from pit to dome six nights and three matinees. Director Usher has cast the players in the following manner:

new Shubert productions will be George Bernard Shaw's comedy, "Fanny's First Play." This piece, said to be the most successful of all from Shaw's pen, has been running for a year in London. The English company will offer the piece in New York at the Little theater on September 18. Another Shaw play to be produced this season by the Shuberts is "Major Barbara."

The Shuberts control the rights to many foreign works in addition to those included in the 50 plays to be produced this season, and neither do the 50 include productions booked in Shubert theaters throughout the country but, directly controlled by allied managers, such as Lew Fields, William A. Brady, Henry W. Savage, Winthrop Ames, Lewis Waller, the Authors Producing company, Fred C. Whitney, Harry Fraser, George Lederer, Walker Whiteside, William Faversham, John Cort, Oliver Morosco, and others.

Another foreign play to be produced at one of the Shubert Broadway theaters this season is Carl Rosler's comedy, called in the original, "The Five Frankfurters," but which will be known in America by the title, "The Golden Lane." The version which met with such success in England will be given in New York. The play treats of the astonishing rise to power of the Rothschild family. "The Master of the House," taken from the German originally, Edgar James will open at the Thirty-ninth Street theater on August 22.

Three American plays by prominent writers which Messrs. Shubert will produce during the early part of the season are a drama by Constance Skinner, formerly dramatic editor of the Chicago American, and a farce by Edgar Franklin and Matthew White, Jr., the short story author and dramatic editor of Munsey's Magazine. The name of the drama by Miss Skinner is "Birthright," and the other is "The Clinch." The third is Lucille La Verne's dramatization of Will N. Harben's novel, "Ann Boyd."

The German field, always a fertile

Kiss Waltz. "Two Little Brides," with James T. Powers, Gaby Deslys with "Vera Violetta," and Al Jolson with "The Whirl of Society," "The Blue Bird," "Sumurun," "Bunty Pulls the Strings," and "A Butterfly on the Wheel."

"ROBIN HOOD."
 "Robin Hood," by Harry B. Smith and Reginald DeKoven, the best light opera ever written by Americans, was resumed at the Knickerbocker theater, Monday night after the song birds' return from their summer vacations. There has been an important change in the cast that was heard at the New Amsterdam in the spring—Beesie Abbott is now Maid Marian. The critics agreed in calling her work excellent.

"JUST LIKE JOHN."
 "Just Like John," programmed "a frank farcical play in three acts," by George Broadhurst and Mark Swan, served to open the New Forty-eighth street theater to the public Monday night. The pretty, little gray-and-ivory house pleased the people more than the play. The piece tells the story of a detective who conceals his business from his wife and gets his picture in the paper beside that of a female anarchist. The comedy is based on this man's earnest endeavors to convince his wife that the picture is of someone else, also to dodge a Russian prince and the female anarchist, who carries a bomb. "Just Like John" is one of those clever comedies, well cast, that would be successful except for their failure to amuse. Florine Arnold, Wilfred Clarke and Walter Jones are among the good actors in the cast who will probably be in some other cast soon.

"OFFICER 666."
 After being dark for four weeks, the Gaiety theater reopened Monday night with Augustin MacHugh's melodramatic farce, "Officer 666." This piece opened late last season and made a distinct name for itself before it was a week old. The genial cop who gives the farce its title is as funny as ever, and the tribulations of the rich young man who borrows his uniform and official character for purposes of justice and romance have undergone no change save that they now are portrayed by Douglas Fairbanks instead of Wallace Eddinger. Mr. Fairbanks is far from a stranger to the role of Travers Gladwin, however, for he played the part in Chicago over 200 times. Ruth Maycliffe, George Nash, Percy Ames, Camille Crane, all of the old cast, with the exception of Mr. Eddinger are repeating their success last season.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—A long time ago, about the time that the high cost of living first became manifest through a raise in the price of theater seats from one clam shell to two, some peripatetic person invented the mistaken-identity plot.

The invention, in time, became one of the most valued properties of the drama. Whiskered playwrights, and those of the feminine gender, who, of course, were no whiskers, flooded the world with plays whose action revolved about this highly entertaining conception.

So common, in fact, has the practice of mistaken identity become, that many prominent citizens, cheated out of what they conceive to be the theatrical birthright by some upstart dramatist who carelessly left that feature out of his play, are recorded as demanding their money back and have even threatened suit if it were not forthcoming.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the old device has again turned up on Broadway. Neither is it surprising that said play, comprising, as it does, a plot that hangs on mistaken identity, with all the intense determination of a bull pup engaged in disputing a bone with a friend, should be greeted as a success—a success that is all the more welcome because of the introduction of the good, old-fashioned, motion picture chase as popular in the "movies."

The play in this instance is "The Girl From Montmartre," Monmartre, it might be mentioned, being a spot in Paris where the inhabitants wear cheaters when they happen to awaken before 5 p. m., on account of the defective vision induced by night life and other things.

In the first act of this interesting farce, Dr. Petypon (Richard Carle) arrives from a tour of the beer gardens of this benighted section of France and peacefully goes to sleep under a couch, which is a very gentlemanly and picturesque act, considering a large and constantly shifting cargo of alcohol which apparently interferes with the doctor's call to such an extent that he might have tipped over the parlor lamp had he attempted to penetrate further into the environs of his domicile.

The doctor, however, is accompanied by other baggage than his alcoholic illumination. He has Miss Hattie Williams with him in the guise of one of the old French who has again turned up on Broadway. Neither is it surprising the hearts of the cheater wearing denizens of Montmartre.

This in itself is an interesting situation, and the effect is heightened when the muddled medico, from his resting place beneath the couch, gracefully waves his female companion to his bedroom, where Mrs. Petypon peacefully sleeps with the impression that her beloved mate is slipping pills to the sick and otherwise comporting himself with the grace and dignity of a regular physician.

At this point, the audience at the Criterion, with the usual keen intelligence of audiences, nightly unmotions its ears, creeps to the edge of its chair, chews its gum with increasing speed and forgets to breathe. But it is disappointed.

Instead of flat-ironing Miss Praline after the fashion of trams of flesh and blood, Mrs. Dr. Petypon mistakes the identity of her visitor and brands her as a split. This is the first offense in the identity mistaking line, but not the last for the identity of Praline is confused with more or less success for two acts and a half, the whole affair winding up with the usual wedding bells and final straightening of the tangle.

"Hanky Panky," a musical melange bearing the brand of approval from frigid Boston and smoky Chicago, also opened on Broadway this week, but as our allotted space is rapidly diminishing and we have a hunch that there will be little doing in New York dramatic circles next week, we prefer to save its review for next Sunday.

THE BIGGEST STONE EVER QUARRIED
 From the Wide World Magazine.
 One of the most interesting proofs of the wonderful civilization of the ancients is afforded by the great slab of stone at Baalbec, in Syria. This huge monolith is 89 feet long, 14 feet broad, and 17 feet in depth. It is said to be the largest piece of stone ever quarried, and its estimated weight is 1,500 tons. It is thought by archaeological scholars that this huge stone was intended by the ancient builders to adorn the Temple of the Sun near-by—now, of course, in ruins. Here, in one of the walls which still stand, are to be seen huge alaba of stone, which careful measurements show to be 42 feet long and 18 feet high. And more remarkable still, they are placed in position 19 feet above the ground level. Moreover, although no sign of any cementing mixture is to be found in these ancient buildings, the stones have been squared and polished to evenly that only after the most minute search can the joints be found, and when traced it is impossible to thrust the blade of a pocket knife between them! How these things were done is a standing mystery to the scientist.

WHITE HOPES FAILING

FAST SAYS NAUGHTON

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 17.—Boston Red Sox vs. Washington Nationals.

Joe Wood vs. Walter Johnson. This is the way the American league pennant race is beginning to size up. Which will it be, the Boston Red Sox and Joe Wood or the Washington Nationals and Walter Johnson?

No single twirler is doing as much to keep his team in the running as Wood and Johnson, both right-handers, young, and practically each owning the same sort of puzzlers—a fast ball that simply whizzes over the plate and whistles as it passes the batter. So far Wood and the Red Sox are in the lead.

In this comparison of the teams and pitchers we eliminate the Athletics, not because they are exactly out of the pennant chase permanently, but to show the wonderful work of Wood and Johnson.

Pitchers That Last Will Win.

The pitcher who sticks it out to the very last, to October 5, probably is going to win this American league pennant for his team. As for the teams individually, all the odds are in favor of Wood, because he is supported by the better team, one of more experience and class, but even these odds do not look to be too great a handicap for Walter Johnson to win the championship for the Nationals.

The Idaho wizard has participated in 30 games, and has yet to get a real bumping. Wood has operated in 27 for his team, and only once has he been chased off the rubber. Quite a sterling exhibition.

Gazing over the records of these two marvels, we find that Johnson really has outpitched Wood where runs are concerned, but Wood is the steadier in allowing the foe to hit him safely. The most runs scored off Johnson in a full game this year were six, and that was May 25, when the Yankees tamed him 6-3. Wood has been charged for eight runs twice, and six on another occasion.

However, just a glance through the scores of their games proves that they are the king bees in the American league's flinging colony. Johnson has six shutout games; five times he has given one sticky run and eight times but two.

Wood is not much on pitching shut-outs, as he has but four to his credit. Still, only two teams in the American league have been able to defeat him. Joe started badly when he lost two

Comiskey Shows His Regard for Sully

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—Rather than send Billy Sullivan to the minor leagues, where he could get a good price for the former star White Sox catcher, President Charles Comiskey will give the player his unconditional release or keep him to coach the young pitchers.

"Sullivan is one of the greatest catchers the game has ever known, and he has been one of the biggest assets of the White Sox for the last nine years," said Comiskey. "He has helped us win a pennant and a world's series, besides developing some of our best pitchers. It would be rank ingratitude to sell him at this late hour."

Comiskey believes the world's champions, the Athletics, will again repeat. "Ryder and Combs are rounding into form for the last dash, as they always do," says the old Roman. "Plank has been the most consistent left-hander of the season. It will be hard work stopping them, as Boston is faltering, and Washington appears to have quit Johnson as a certain winner in the box."

or his first five games, the Nationals beating him 6 to 2 and the Athletics 2 to 1. Later the Athletics repeated over him twice. After the champs trimmed him, May 25, his only defeat from that day to the present moment is July 4. That's a record of one reverse in two months.

Johnson Lost Three Straight.

Johnson has the peculiar record of three successive defeats, which are marked on June 26, 28 and 29. He hooked up with his rival, Wood, June 26, just after recovering from his attack of tonsillitis, and was stopped 3 to 0. Two days later he worked one inning, and the Athletics scored the winning run off him. The next day the Athletics noosed him out 2 to 1. But now Walter is on a record of eight straight victories.

Of course, Johnson is the strikeout king, 100 against 150. Against the White Sox recently he breezed 21 in two games, while he has another mark of 23 in three days, or two games. And it also might be noted that only once has the enemy crushed into Walter for base hits of the double figure. And that total was 13, but he won just the same.

Each pitcher has his followers among the fans and players in the American league. Canvass the Browns, though, and the majority of them will declare Wood the superior of Johnson. They say Wood's fast one has more smoke than Johnson's, and his hook ball has a bigger break. Others will pick Johnson as the mightiest of the mighties. But there's a reason probably for the Browns trailing with Wood. Here it is: They've scored six runs off him in 36 innings, accompanied by only 21 hits, while they've scored four runs off Johnson, with 13 hits in 21 innings.

Who is it? Wood or Johnson?

HEATH WINS SWIM

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 17.—Chasney Heath of the Missouri Athletic club won the 10-mile swim down the Mississippi river this afternoon with 500 yards to spare.

FAUST DUE TODAY; MATCH WEDNESDAY

The fair sex will undoubtedly be generously represented at Zoo park Wednesday, Alderman Coughlin having announced that ladies will be admitted free to the wrestling match between Harry Faust of Wichita and Hassan Yousoff. When the latter wrestled Yarny at the Zoo about a month ago, more than 100 ladies enjoyed the bout, which was one of the best ever seen here, and double that number are expected Wednesday night.

Faust, who will attempt to throw the Turk twice in an hour or forfeit the purse, will reach here probably this afternoon and will finish up his work with a couple of days' hard training. Faust is the heavyweight champion of Kansas and tips the beam at 205 pounds, which gives him a big weight advantage over Yousoff. The handicap even things, however, and the match promises to be one of the best local fans have had a chance to see.

As a preliminary to the main event, Jimmy Mack, the popular local welterweight champion, and Kid Spooner, also a local grappler, will go on for the best two out of three falls, and are sure to put up a fast exhibition. Another preliminary is also promised.

GOOD BOXING BOUTS SET FOR THURSDAY

By way of showing that he is training hard for his boxing bout with Billy King, next Thursday night, Jimmy Mack is exhibiting a forehead filled with bumps and bruises. As there are no matmen of his weight in these parts just now, Mack has gone back to the game of the padded mitts, which gave him his athletic start, and he predicts a merry evening for King.

The bout will be put on at a smoker to be given in Colorado City, under the auspices of the El Paso County Young Men's Republican club, and Mack and King will go eight rounds, all things being equal, as a windup to the sport card.

A three-round go between a pair of pennyweights, for the local championship in that division, will open the show, and this will be followed by a wrestling bout between Kid Woods and Young Borden. This will be best two out of three falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Topperwein, the celebrated shots, will give an exhibition of expert and fancy shooting at the Colorado Springs Gun club range, near Broadmoor, next Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

There is no doubt that their exhibition

ADOLPH TOPPERWEIN.

tion will be a revelation to all of the wonderful possibilities of modern arms and ammunition in the hands of the greatest experts in the country. Topperwein is the acknowledged dean of fancy and trick shots, and his many feats are of a sensational character. Mrs. Topperwein has no equal among women for adeptness in shooting, and ladies are especially urged to go to the Broadmoor range Friday and witness her exceptional skill with shotgun, rifle and pistol. Admission will be free to all.

Topperwein, who is a native of San Antonio, Tex., is recognized throughout the country as the greatest fancy and flying target shot with a rifle. He represents a big arms manufacturing company, but does not carry any special equipment, all his wonderful shooting being done with ordinary Winchester rifles.

His most remarkable exhibition of rifle shooting probably was when he shot for 10 days at 23,000 Spanish wooden blocks thrown into the air by an assistant, missing only nine out of the entire lot and only four out of the first 30,000. During the shooting he made straight runs of 14,540, 13,589, 13,292, 12,219 and 10,353. The shooting outfit he used was two Winchester rifles, and he did his own loading. Considering the almost incredible score, and the tremendous strain of such incessant shooting, it is unlikely that this record will ever be beaten. Other of his remarkable feats with the rifle were his scoring of 85 out of 100 25-inch targets thrown into the air while riding at full speed in an automobile, and the breaking of 3,507 targets without a miss at the St. Louis World's fair. He does wonderful work with revolver, pistol and shotgun also, and is the originator of many fancy and trick shots.

Mrs. Topperwein, who shoots to demonstrate the superior quality of a smokeless powder, is undoubtedly the premier lady shot of the world. She took up shooting only a few years ago, but she has startled the shooting world and entertained many thousands of people by her great skill with rifle, shotgun and pistol. Her first public appearance was at the St. Louis World's fair, where, with a Winchester rifle, she broke 987 out of 1,000 25-inch flying targets, and later 1,935 out of 2,000, with a straight run of 1,437.

Resides being a wonderful quip and fancy shot, Mrs. Topperwein is a consistent shooter at the traps, and has won many high averages in open competitions shooting against the best professionals and amateurs in the world. At the Pacific coast handicap in 1910 she won high average over a large field of the best shots of the western coast and Canada. The first day of the tournament she broke 154 out of 200, which included 30 doubles, and on the final day she broke the entire program of 100 single straight.

Her score at the Grand American handicap in Chicago in 1910, where she was the only woman shooting, was 984 out of 1,000 25-inch flying targets. She is the only woman in the world who ever had the honor to qualify as a national marksman in open competition, shooting at 200, 300 and 500 yards with a military rifle.

LUCKY AND UNLUCKY MAGNATES

Attorney John M. Ward, former diamond star, who quit baseball for good when he resigned the presidency of the Boston Pilgrims the other day, James E. Gaffney (at the right) Ward's successor at the head of the Boston club, and Charles W. Murphy (insert), president of the Chicago National League club. Ward is the leading tough luck disciple in the financial end of baseball. President Murphy of the Cubs is known as the luckiest of the moguls. A lucky tip gave him control of the Cubs, things broke his way and he made a million with a perfect cinch.

'Why' of a Baseball Curve Is Explained

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The "why" of a baseball curve should not longer be a mystery, at least to the students of the Columbia university's summer school. In a lecture on the "Science of Baseball Curves," the other night, Professor W. S. Franklin explained it as follows:

"The whole secret of a curved ball lies in the relation of the pressure to the velocity and the spin that the pitcher gives it as it leaves his hand."

"Daniel Bernoulli, a Swiss physician, who died in 1782, was the man who discovered the principle. He was observing a stream of water that flowed through wide pools and narrow shoals. In the pools he soon found that the velocity was almost nothing. In the shoals he said that the velocity was very swift, while the pressure had almost disappeared.

"This is the principle that governs the flight and curve of a ball. If the ball sails straight through the air with no spin, the air is pushed aside equally in all directions and the ball is directly under the control of gravity so far as its curves is concerned, and it soon falls to the ground. Whereas, if the front of the ball is given a downward spin, there is in it, in addition to the straight forcing aside of the air, a circulation motion of the air around the ball. This motion being over and then under the ball tends to increase the speed with which the air passes beneath the ball and it retards it above the ball."

The name "Bernoulli" as applied to a passage in derived from a small Venetian coin, the price of the first

THOMAS SHADES CONLEY IN TWENTY ROUND GO

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 17.—Harry Thomas of Birmingham, England, was given the decision, today, over Frankie Conley of Kenosha, Wis., at the end of their 20-round bout at the Vernon arena. It was one of the fiercest fights ever staged at Vernon. Thomas forfeited his weight money by refusing to weigh in. In the ring he appeared to be close to the lightweight limit, while Conley said he weighed 113. Referee E. J. Foyt declared all his off because Thomas was over weight. Of the 20 rounds, Thomas had the better of 10, Conley eight, and they were even.

Thomas's own camp for this year is estimated at $3,000,000,000.

By W. W. NAUGHTON

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—"One by one they wander from us," is the refrain of an old song that treats of the desertion of the old homestead by successive members of the family. With a few simple changes the ditty would adapt itself to the white hope situation.

First, Carl Morris, and now Luther McArthur, whom Billy McArthur with flashing eyes and swelling breast declared would one day grow so famous that his name would become a household word. The New York craves let Luther down easy. When Jim Stewart outbought the big noise at every stage of a husband bout, they said McArthur held out promise of improvement.

Again, and again with such insincere twaddle. The white hope who has failed under trial, but who is "going to do better when he has a fight or two under his belt," is in a class with the faded champion who is going to the mountains to recuperate. He is a mighty unsafe proposition.

It goes to show that after all fighting is a trade. The fighter who is born, and not made, is a scarce specimen of humanity. In the light of what is happening, the sayings of Philadelphia Jack, Brian and Jack Johnson seem eggermatic.

"I can look any man who has not had two years experience in the professional ring," remarked Philadelphia John prior to his San Francisco go with Al Kaufman.

Player 'Not Yet Developed'

Falza is not ripe yet," said Champion Johnson, when asked at Lehigh whether he regarded Palmer in the light of a possible opponent. There was in the tone which suggested that Johnson considered Palmer an easy mark, but felt that the big Iowa would have to be coddled along a bit further, to stimulate public interest and increase the prospects of a large attendance. The trouble with white hopes is that they are exploited mainly on their dimensions, and before they have accomplished anything to speak of size and strength and the power to smite are

STALLINGS CARDED TO DIRECT BRAVES

BUFFALO, Aug. 17.—George Stallings, manager of the Buffalo team of the International league, has consented to lead the Boston Braves next year. He has arranged terms with President James E. Gaffney of the Boston club, and will have full and complete charge of the club for 1913. Stallings has been anxious to get back into the big league since he was succeeded by Hal Chase in the management of the Yankees two years ago. He and Gaffney are very warm friends. Stallings took a seventh place club in New York and brought it up to second place in one year. He has always been a success in the minor leagues.

Gaffney has consulted Stallings about the men who are to be purchased or drafted for next year. The pair have gone over the chances for the club. Gaffney knows that with a good club he can make a lot of money in Boston. John King will not take the requirement with bad grace, for, to tell the truth, he wants to get away and to get out of the big league. John's ambition is to round out his baseball career as manager of the Kansas City club. If he could get his unconditional release he would catch for Kansas City, manage, captain and be a whale in the American association. He could get as much money as he does in Boston and be home nine months instead of six, and be near at home the other two weeks.

John is through as a major league catcher after this year, and it is, and he will be tickled to pieces if he can have it so arranged that he will be manager of the Kansas City club and if he can get his release from Boston and get out of the National league.

SPECIAL FEATURES AT GOLF CLUB YESTERDAY

In the semifinals for the Frame cup, at the Colorado Springs Golf club, yesterday, P. Hagerman beat J. P. Hubbell, 2 up and O. R. Gillett beat W. K. Jewett, 5 up and 3 to play. The finals, between Hagerman and Gillett, will be played next Saturday afternoon.

Play for the Prairie cup was followed by a mixed aprandizing and putting contest, which was won by Dr. and Mrs. Brown. Both were presented with silver trophies by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Harmon.

In the ladies' clock contest, Mrs. H. B. Davis turned in the lowest score going around the dial in 24. Mrs. J. S. Tucker captured second place, after playing off a tie with Mrs. F. J. Davis. Scores in the approaching and putting contest were as follows:

Dr. and Mrs. Brown, 100; Mr. and Mrs. Brown, 100; E. J. Ulrich and Mrs. Chisholm, 100; George A. Krause and Mrs. O'Brien, 100; J. E. McIntyre and Mrs. Davis, 100; Judge Anderson and Mrs. Field, 100; Dr. and Mrs. Blackman, 100; Mr. and Mrs. Hodgett, 100; Mr. and Mrs. Gardiner, 100.

LABOR LEAGUE SCORES

In the Union Labor league, yesterday, at Washburn field, the Carpenters defeated the Painters, 10 to 9 in an exciting game. Batteries, Felsch and Russell, Carpenters; and Felsch and Russell, Painters. The game was staged at Zoo park, the Plumbers won from the Tanners by a score of 4 to 1. Batteries, Jardine and St. John, Reed and Henry.

merely fundamental qualities for a cub boxer's weight. They are next to useless until he has acquired a fine education, which during almost any generation of pugilists, is a hard thing to acquire.

The woods are full of them who, while they lack real championship requirements, are plenty good enough to scatter the dreams of the hopes. A dozen years ago, the "boy nels," Kid McCoy and a few others were the watch dogs and trial horses of the heavyweights in the ring. Today we have Jim Flynn and Jim Stewart.

They are his followers to get by. A lesson in one of them has a double effect. Inasmuch as it is a novice back and at the same time discourages him. This is made apparent in the case of Carl Morris. Before he tackled Jim Flynn there was no such word as fail in the bright lexicon of the stalwart Oklahoma. Since then, he has been a mark for every man he boxed.

San Francisco is just now interested in the fortunes of White Hope Charlie Miller, whom Califfotti has signed for a 20-round bout with Jim Flynn at Daly City, on Labor day. Miller has had an entirely different experience from his brother hopes. There was no booming of brass bands and prophecies of future greatness when Charlie butted into the game. No story of his life was published, illustrated with photographs of him at the ages of 4, 17 and 23. He was simply regarded as a good-natured loon, who frequented every training quarter of the great in pugilism, because he seemed to like being thumped.

Miller Relishes Punishment. Some fighters who are anxious to test their full hitting power while under preparation cause their partners to wear pneumatic body guards. There was no occasion to do that when Miller volunteered for duty. The harder he was hit the better he appeared to relish it, a fact that Stanley Katchel and others were often called to explain when spectators remarked that Miller was being subjected to unnecessary punishment.

It is something in a heavyweight's favor to be immune to stiff smashes, and this Miller certainly is. No matter what kind of a swing or drive Flynn may inflict, Miller will have felt the counterpart of it at some time in his career and, for that matter, he will have sampled a few punches that Flynn is not master of.

This means that being struck solidly and often will not divert Miller's attention from the main issue of the bout to the extent it would if he were unaccustomed to being under bombardment.

Flynn's signing with Miller is an exemplification of the ups and downs of pugilism. A month ago Flynn was up against the greatest fighter in the world, and now he is to box the least known of the heavies. As Flynn thinks that with Johnson out of it, he is the one best entitled to wear the championship toga, he will have to defeat Miller signally, or else suffer an awful slump in prestige. Miller, who is anything but boastful, is looking forward to the September match expectantly.

"I am not foolish enough to think that I am a world beater at present, but I suppose I can claim that I am improving right along," said Miller. "I have seen enough of fighting to be able to judge men, and I do not think that Flynn can beat me. He is not big enough to begin with, and I don't think he hits hard enough. I hope for his own sake he is not holding me too cheap."

Marking Ute Trail Interesting Feature of Season

Pioneers and Band Indians From Southern Colorado Reservation Will Do Work in Spectacular Manner at Manitou, August 29—Much Has Been Said and Written Regarding Historic Old Path.

Perhaps the most interesting event of the carnival week will be the marking of the old Ute Indian trail, which will be done in a most spectacular way by a committee composed of members of the El Paso County Pioneer association and a band of Indians from the southern Colorado Ute reservation. This will occur at Manitou on the morning of the twenty-ninth.

The Ute trail is undoubtedly the oldest Indian trail in the United States. Dr. James, who was the historian of the Long expedition, more than 30 years ago, wrote concerning it. Even then the trail was well marked in the solid granite, worn by the soft moccasins of Indians and the hoofs of their unshod ponies.

Hon. Irving Howbert has probably made a deeper study of the early life in this western region than any other person. He has collected a considerable library on the subject and today is putting into permanent form a large mass of material bearing on the early people. Mr. Howbert is chairman of the committee on marking the trail. The other members are Messrs. D. N. Heizer, E. E. Nichols, H. I. Reid and Mrs. Long of Cascade. The latter they illustrate what the carnival committee had in mind when it adopted the Shan Kiva as the basis for the organization for the annual Pikes Peak region summer carnival.

Dr. James of the Long expedition wrote:

A large and much frequented road passes the springs and enters the mountains running to the north of the high peak. He says of the springs.

Dr. James on the Springs. The boiling spring is a large and beautiful fountain of water, cool and transparent and aerated with carbonic acid. It rises on the brink of a small stream which here descends from the mountains at the point where the head of this stream divides the ridge of sandstone which rises against the base of the first granite range. The water of the spring deposits a copious concentration of carbonate of lime which accumulates on every side, until it has formed a large basin overhanging the stream, above which it rises several feet. The basin is of snowy whiteness and large enough to contain three or four hundred gallons, and is constantly overflowing. The spring rises from the bottom of the basin with a rumbling noise, discharging about equal volumes of air and water. Probably about 50 gallons per minute. The whole kept in constant agitation. The water is beautifully transparent, has a sparkling appearance, the grateful taste and the exhilarating effect of the most highly aerated artificial water.

In the bottom of the spring a great number of beads and other small articles of Indian adornment were found, having unquestionably been left there as a sacrifice or present to the springs, which are regarded with a sort of veneration by the savages. Bileau, our guide, assured us he had repeatedly taken beads and other adornments from these springs and sold them to the same savages who had thrown them in.

A Mr. Rufus B. Sage, who describes himself as a New Englander, after passing through this region in 1842, published a book giving his experiences and observations. In speaking of the Fontaine Qui Bouille creek and the springs, he says:

Early Description Fountain Creek. This name is derived from two singular springs situated within a few yards of each other at the foot of the mountain, both of which emit water in the form of vapor, with a hissing noise; one strongly impregnated with sulphur and the other with soda. The soda water is fully as good as any manufactured for special use and sparkles and foams with equal effervescence. The Arapahoes regard this phenomenon with awe, and venerate it as the manifestation of the immediate presence of the Great Spirit. They call it the "Medicine Fountain," and seldom neglect to bestow their gifts upon it whenever an opportunity is presented. These offerings generally consist of robes, blankets, arrows, knives, beads, moccasins, etc., which they either throw into the water, or hang upon the surrounding trees.

Sometimes a whole village will visit the place for the purpose of paying their united regard to this sacred fountain.

The scenery of the vicinity is truly magnificent. The valley several yards in width heads the springs, and, overlooking it from the west in almost perpendicular ascent, tower the lofty summits of Pikes Peak, piercing the clouds and revealing in eternal snow. This valley opens westward and is walled in at the right and left at the mountain's base, by a stretch of high tableland surrounded by peaks and craters, and then a high, craggy, and steeply rising mountain, the top of which is a perfect plain and very rich. The trees which skirt the creek as it travels its way from the fountain, are generally free from underbrush, and show almost as much regularity of position as if planted by the hand of art. A just growth of vegetation is sustained among them to their very trunks, which is summered by wild flowers during the summer months. The forest, the whole scene with an enchantment peculiar to itself.

Climate Exceedingly Mild. The climate, too, is far milder in this than in adjoining regions; even of a more southern altitude. "This happens," says Mr. Howbert, "because the mountains first unfold their robes, and here the longest winter. The grass continues green the entire winter. Here first feels the genial touch of spring. Snow seldom remains upon the ground to exceed a single day, even in the severest weather, while the neighboring hills and prairies present their white mantles for weeks in succession.

As the creek emerges from the mountains, it increases in size by the accession of several tributaries and the valley also expands, retaining for a considerable distance the distinguishing traces above described.

The vicinity affords an abundance of game, among which are deer, sheep, bear, antelope, elk and buffalo, together with turkeys, geese, ducks, and various other birds. The water of the spring is started by my approach, and springs across the river, bounded off up the mountain. In the upper part of the rock, which had been formed by the deposition, was a beautiful, white basin overhanging by current bubbles, in which the cold clear water bubbled up, kept in constant motion by the escaping gas and overflowing the rock which it had almost entirely covered with a smooth crust of effervescent water.

Delight in Drinking Waters. I had all day refrained from drinking, reserving myself for the springs, and as I could not well be more, so than the rain had already made me, I lay down by the side of the basin and drank heartily of the delightful water.

As it was now beginning to grow dark, I rode quickly down the river in which I found the broken country being beautiful and clear and all of the people being anxious to drink of these famous waters, we encamped immediately at the springs and spent there a very pleasant day.

On the opposite side of the river is another locality of springs which are entirely of the same nature. The water has a very agreeable taste, which Mr. Prusse found very much to resemble that of the famous Selzer spring in the Grand Duchy of Nassau, a country famous for wine and mineral waters.

Resuming our journey the morning of the 18th we descended the river in order to reach the mouth of the eastern fork, which I planned to ascend. The left bank of the river is here very much broken. There is a handsome little bottom on the right, and both banks are exceedingly picturesque. A strata of ribbed rock in nearly perpendicular walls, crosses the valley from north to south.

NEW STYLE SCULPTOR KNOWN AS "EXPLOSION"

Future Generations Will Dwell With Wonder on
This Arrangement, Just as People Now
Speak of Renaissance or Gothic

By GEORGE DUFRESNE

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A clever French writer has discovered the latest style in sculpture and architecture, which we are to know hereafter as the "explosion" style. Just as people speak of the Renaissance style or the Gothic style, so future generations will dwell with wonder on the explosion style. Architects and sculptors have within the last 10 years broken loose from all old canons. They were going to have something new, too, like the painters who became Impressionists, Neo-Impressionists, Independents, Cubists, and finally Futurists.

The explosionists are represented in many of the recent monuments in Paris. The front of houses and facades of public buildings present a maze of contorted lines, which must be the result of an explosive imagination, if not of some actual terrestrial upheaval. The statues of poets, musicians, heroes and celebrated men generally erected within the last decade all bear the signs of the explosion style. Poets are represented with their books scattered about on rocks or precipices, and they seem to be looking in wonder at the havoc around them. Musicians are represented with broken instruments, public men raise their hands to their foreheads, evidently stunned by the report of a sudden cataclysm. If we examine any recent statue in Paris we shall find that the first idea suggested is one of some terrible catastrophe. Our heroes are bent in twain; they stoop or they look around in a state of agony, as if they saw nothing but ruin and desolation around them caused by the bomb of some anarchist. The sculptor has evidently caught the spirit of the time, and perhaps unconsciously he has become an explosionist. The new style is now adequately described. A name has been found for it which will be carefully recorded in the dictionaries of the future.

NO DAMAGES WHEN BEAUTY CURE FAILS

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A woman of Lyons who desired to have the beauty of youth restored to her and failed to achieve her wish, today asked $5,000 damages against a doctor as the price of disfigurement.

The doctor had offered to remove the wrinkles in her cheeks by lifting the skin and sewing it to the forehead under her hair. The operation succeeded beautifully on the right cheek. The left cheek, however, refused to succumb to the beauty doctor's treatment, and the woman has now a youthful right cheek which is firm and blooming, and an elderly left cheek with wrinkles and the half of a double chin.

She thought that the disfigurement was worth $5,000. The court undecided her and gave her nothing.

LORD PORTMAN IS ACTIVE DESPITE HIS MANY YEARS

LORD PORTMAN.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Lord Portman, who has vast estates in London and whose Dorset seat is at Bryanstone, has just completed his eighty-third year and still rides with the hounds and takes an active interest in political and municipal matters.

He entered parliament in 1852, at the age of 23, as member of Shaftesbury party. Shaftesbury was a "family interest" borough with about 600 electors, and Lord Portman was not called upon to contest it.

When he represented Dorset he had one fight. "The three elected candidates," says Lord Portman, "had each to put on a cocked hat and a sword, and after the declaration of the poll we had to ride down the streets of Dorchester to the town pump and back again." This was his last and only contested election.

He is returned again and again until 1887, when the county was divided into four constituencies, and he did not stand

ENGLAND IS TO SPEND $2,500,000 IN DEVELOPING PROTECTORATES

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Aug. 17.—England is going to spend $2,500,000 on the development of Uganda and British East Africa next year and this outlay is not to prove a very good investment, which will tend to make this country independent of America's cotton supply. Uganda is an ideal country for the raising of cotton, labor is cheap and the quality of the product almost as good as that of Egypt. Lancashire wants all the cheap cotton she can get and Uganda can grow just the sort that Lancashire wants.

The success of the Uganda railroad has been marvelous. Eight years ago its receipts were $600,000; they are now $2,120,000. A loss of $300,000 in 1903-4 has been turned into a present profit of $675,000. The railroad of 800 miles from Mombasa to the Lake Victoria Nyanza is no longer equal to the work thrown upon it, and a sum of $1,500,000 is about to be spent in all manner of improvements and in a much-needed increase of the rolling stock.

Yet another $125,000 is to be spent on a new line in the Uganda protectorate, which is to form the beginning of a new trunk line to the Congo state, and on the far side of Uganda $500,000 is to be expended on macadamized roads for motor traffic, so that native cotton crops may be cheaply borne down to the lake.

Good Work is Undone.

All the money spent by Tory papers in sending British working men to Germany to teach them the blessings of a high protective tariff, seems apt to have been wasted, for although the British workmen who are permitted to see only what they ought to see abroad, came back enthusiastic and became very good agitators for Joe Chamberlain's pet cause, a party of German workmen who left here the other day, and who had been permitted to travel unaccompanied by any party dry nurse have spoiled everything by their statements in an interview just before they left.

The leader of the party, Mr. G. Kiesewetter, who is a teacher and a cultured man, said: "We divided into several sections, and we are able to compare notes about a great many places. Some of us went to Sutton and Co's seed farm at Reading, and the local cooperative society's works. These things were exceedingly interesting to us because some of us are strong cooperators. At Northampton we saw how your boots are made; at Grimsby we inspected the great fish market; at Luton we took an interest in the straw hat industry."

English Conditions Better.

The consensus of opinion is that conditions generally are pretty much the same as in Germany, but we find that your meat is cheaper than ours, and your bread is slightly less in price. Here you buy lovely English beef as low as sevenpence per pound, while we should in Germany have to pay twopence or threepence a pound more for meat of the same quality.

"We are more than ever convinced that you will not improve the lot

WAR TALK SIMPLY SERVES DIPLOMATS

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Aug. 17.—There will be no war with Germany now or next year or probably ever. It serves the ends of politicians and speculators to keep the war scare going, but it is all a mischievous burden. The Kaiser means peace. Next year King George and Queen Mary will pay their state visit to Berlin, and will be given a great welcome. The Prince of Wales will go with them, and his engagement to the Kaiser's only daughter will then be announced. All the stories of the young lady's betrothal to other princes are untrue.

With a production of more than 5,000,000,000 pounds, the Chilean nitrate fields established a new record last year.

of your workmen by introducing tariffs. We are not sure that you will even increase the volume of trade. A matter of fact, we do not think tariffs do increase employment. Your tariff reformers say: "Look at the German workman. His life and his conditions are much better than those of the English workman." Our investigations of how the English people live and work do not bear this out. We find there is really very little difference.

"What we do think is that in some respects our methods are superior to yours? We did not find much that we did not know about manufacture."

"On the contrary, we consider we beat you in some things, and we certainly think that our state laws and our hygiene demands, and institutions are better than yours."

A TAXICAB DRIVER GETS 4 CTS DAMAGES

PARIS, Aug. 17.—Twopence, or cents, was the amount in question in a case between a taxicab driver and his fare, which was tried first before a justice of the peace, and then on appeal before the civil tribunal of the Seine.

M. Pochon one day hired a taxi in front of No. 14 Boulevard Poissonniere and drove to the police station in the Rue Chateaulin. When he reached his destination the chauffeur demanded sevenpence-halfpenny (or 19 cents), the sum marked by the taximeter. M. Pochon refused to pay more than 15 cents, urging that, according to the tariff, he had the right to 1,000 yards of space or 2 minutes, 12 seconds of time for that sum. Now the distance from No. 14 Boulevard Poissonniere to the police station in the Rue Chateaulin was only 820 yards, according to the careful calculation of M. Pochon, who therefore tendered his 15 cents, which the chauffeur refused to accept. The justice of the peace upheld M. Pochon's contention and gave judgment against the chauffeur, who appealed to the civil tribunal.

However, taking into consideration the fact that on its way from one point to the other the taxi had always crossed the always crowded boulevards it was decided that, though M. Pochon had strictly, when he reached his destination, 60 yards or 24 seconds still to run, these 24 seconds had in all probability been already exhausted in some block of traffic. The chauffeur then had the right to 2 cents more than he was offered by his fare, namely, 17 cents. That sum M. Pochon must pay with compound interest on the super-numerary penny of the costs, which amount to over $50. A third will be borne by the chauffeur and two-thirds by the recalcitrant fare M. Pochon. Neither, doubtless, will grudge the price of his principle—or pig-headedness.

TITLED WOMAN TO GO A-GYPSY-ING.

Lady Arthur Grosvenor, whose husband is heir presumptive to the Duchy of Westminster, is about to take another one of her gypsy jaunts. This time the titled exponent of outdoor life will make her route through the southern part of France. Lady Grosvenor will have two spacious one-horse caravans, gaily painted in her favorite colors of red and yellow. The wagons are equipped with benches and cots and other necessary articles of furniture so arranged that they may be folded up against the sides of the wagons, and thus allow plenty of room while on the road. She will be accompanied by her young son and daughter and will visit all the places of interest within driving distance of her scheduled route.

LIBERAL GOVERNMENT OF GREAT BRITAIN PASSING THROUGH CRISIS

By PHILLIP EVERETT

LONDON, Aug. 17.—Every lover of liberty and progress in England realizes at present that the liberal government, that has done more for political progress in this stagnant little island than any government England ever had, is passing through a serious crisis, which, if worse does not happen, will result in quite a number of changes in the composition of the cabinet before parliament meets again. Among these changes it is quite sure that Mr. Birrell, who in temperament, wit and love of a good joke, even if on himself, resembles the typical Irishman, will leave Ireland, probably to enter the House of Lords, and if my information is correct he will be replaced by Herbert Samuel, who, as a bone, resembles an Irishman least of all. John Burns also is scheduled for removal, at least, I hear that he is a thorn in the flesh of Mr. Asquith, but how to get rid of him is another matter.

But the most burning question of all is: What is to become of Winston Churchill?

Churchill and George Still Friends.

In spite of all reports to the contrary circulated in the Tory press, the personal friendship between Churchill and Lloyd George is as firm as ever, but politically they differ widely and the breach between their political opinions is widening every day, and there are plenty of people in politics who assert that within a year Mr. Churchill will have followed the example of Joseph Chamberlain and will be found among the ranks of the enemy, who in that case will probably wish he had remained where he was, for though he is a jingo on the question of the big navy, he is in all other respects a true democrat, who will never agree with the old-fashioned ideas of the conservatives. But the feeling against Churchill's naval plans is very strong in the radical wing of the government party, where social reforms are considered more necessary than new dreadnoughts which only tend to irritate Germany, and the prime minister may find it necessary to find another first lord of the admiralty rather than running the risk of estranging a large number of radical and labor votes in the house, which are absolutely necessary for the success of the government's program.

Among the Tories the situation is little better. It is too late to say that Bonar Law is a disappointment, for nobody expects a lead from him, but it is not too much to say that the whole party is sick and tired of him and would gladly relegate him to his old obscure position if this could be done without washing too much dirty linen in the public and without attracting attention to the lack of solidarity in the party. The Tories hope to be able to make a strong assault upon the government next session, when Lloyd George's land policy is brought forward, and as it is bad policy to swap horses while crossing a stream, Bonar Law will probably be allowed to remain where he is.

From a most reliable source I know that repeated attempts have been made to induce Arthur J. Balfour to become once more the pilot of his party, but he is far too well pleased with his present freedom to be enticed back into harness.

At any rate, Bonar Law is better than F. E. Smith, Winston Churchill's bosom friend, and the Tory party's bad boy, who would undoubtedly make a dash for the leadership as soon as there should be a vacancy and this would be a greater calamity than most men in the party would be able to bear. The mere thought of a man with Mr. Smith's manners as leader of the conservative party is enough to drive the older and presumably wiser heads mad.

TOURISTS HAVE MANIA FOR STEALING SOAP

LONDON, Aug. 17.—There is a serious absence of cake-soap from the hotels on the tourist belt of West Scotland, and nearly all of the soap supply is in liquid or powder form. It might be thought that this was due to a belief in Scotland in the mechanical appliance by which a skout or a spray of soap is delivered to the washer, but a correspondent who has just returned from the west coast tells us that, alas! this is not so. He made inquiries of more than one big hotel and was assured at each that the spray and the trickle were safeguards against the Yankees. No American tourist, he was told, can see a cake of hotel soap without putting it in his pocket, provided he is unobserved. It is a grave charge, and it would be interesting to have the case for the defense. "They are a splendid people to deal with," said one of the hotel keepers, "but unchained, portable soap is their undoing."

"The matter of soap is one of the international quarrels of manners. The whitest American is as dishonest about a cake of soap as the blackest of his compatriots is about chicken. He will steal anybody's cake of soap. And just across the channel you find countries where you carry your own soap, and would as soon think of a public cake of soap as of a public tooth brush."

CLEVER SWINDLERS COME TO GRIEF

PARIS, Aug. 17.—A decree of expulsion has just been issued against a couple of ingenious gentlemen said to be American citizens. Last May the two friends entered the shop of a maker of gambling apparatus and offered to buy his business. The offer being refused, they ordered a $400 roulette table, which was delivered on June 26. The merchant in the meantime had been making inquiries about his curious clients, and learned that one of them had been gaining large sums at the roulette table in Italy. His suspicions were confirmed when one of his employees told him of a conversation with the two friends, in which the following proposal was made to him: "Whenever you have a roulette table to deliver at a gaming house, bring it quietly to us. We shall keep it an hour or two, and then you can take it to its destination. In return we will make you an allowance of $30 a month and $40 for each roulette."

The merchant, who had been further struck by the fact that the roulette ordered had been thrice bought back by its purchasers for certain readjustments, informed the police, and the chief of the department which deals with gaming, having examined the famous roulette, pronounced it faked. From the proposal made to the employee it seems probable that the two swindlers intended to substitute faked roulette for those of the maker. Learning where their doctored machines had been set up, they could obviously have played with the croupiers at winning. Henceforward, France will offer no field for their talents.

NICOTINE AND HEMP SUCCEEDING THE THOROUGHBRED

By ELIZABETH DAINGERFIELD.

WHEN the men of the old world, who had the courage to go forth across unknown wastes of water, into unknown lands in search of what each man's imagination pictured in a remote way, they found a country prepared as a gleam of hope for them and their descendants by a beneficent providence. These lands were as diverse as the people came in time to possess them. But in all the vast story there is no single spot more exquisite or more beautiful than what is called in the older histories the "Stone Grass Country" of Central Kentucky, because of the peculiar quality of the abundant natural grass that grows beneath even the great shade trees and the overtopping limestone rock.

This is the home of the famed Blue Grass known country, almost the world over. Before the foot of the first settlers in this territory the buffalo, deer and other large game had found the Blue Grass volder pasture, and the earliest pioneers followed the paths of the feet of the animals to whom their coming meant extermination.

The beauty and strength of the native Blue Grass is not exaggerated. All through the year it is green, retains its abundant food qualities, making the Blue Grass Country an unsurpassed grazing ground for all kinds of stock, but particularly adapted to the horse. The herds that feed the horse is most particular as to his food and pasture, and he is also the most inquisitive to the land upon which he grazes, as he eats or weeds.

For hundreds of years, long before Kentucky was separated from Virginia, this small section of land, which only from thirty to fifty miles square, was recognized as the cream of the stock-producing area of the country. Then the greatest of all beauties, the "woods" were not scattered as now, and water was more abundant.

The value of the wood, much of it black walnut, is now extremely scarce, tempted the alien people who came to clear the forest. They had not needed a deep enough affection for the new land to stand the temptation which money offered, and now the children's children suffer from their short-sightedness.

LET to enjoy the actual beauty of the Blue Grass there are still enough wooded fields and shaded meadows to perfect the picture. The appearance of the rolling land and broad rich fields is much like that of England, though the air brings visions of the future. The American spirit broods lightly and the dreams are golden with hope and promise.

From time immemorial the zealots, bigots, fanatics, self-seeking have destroyed the treasures of art, splendors of literary achievement and values of all kinds far beyond their power to recreate. Yet, if ever in the world's history, has such immense and far-reaching destruction been wrought in one city by the act of another far distant as the blight of the ignorant fanaticism or political greed of the rulers of the distant State of New York has sent upon fair fields of Kentucky.

The immediate result of the enactment against racing has been the falling off in the number of horses bred. The smaller owners, the men who raised, bred and loved the well-bred horse, were immediately ousted from the field. A few wealthy men were able to keep their horses and race abroad, though more prepared to remove the stock entirely to foreign countries. The record shows that in 1911 the Agricultural Experiment Station defined the word "farm" as a piece of land for cultivation or in grass, containing four acres or

But it is the cessation of racing, the destruction of the thoroughbred horse's value, which means ultimately the extinction of the thoroughbred, without which there is no means of replenishing the blood from which all classes of horseflesh draw their strength, that has dealt the heaviest blow.

THE breeding of horses is falling off at a rate that leaves a serious question. Within a dangerously few years the mounting of our armies will be, even in time of peace, an almost unsolvable problem. An ill-mounted army loses much of that psychological element which makes for courage and daring, a thing which should be considered well by all who oppose the horse. Much has been said also of the "pluck of the rider," which influences the horse, yet the rule is equally true when worked the other way round.

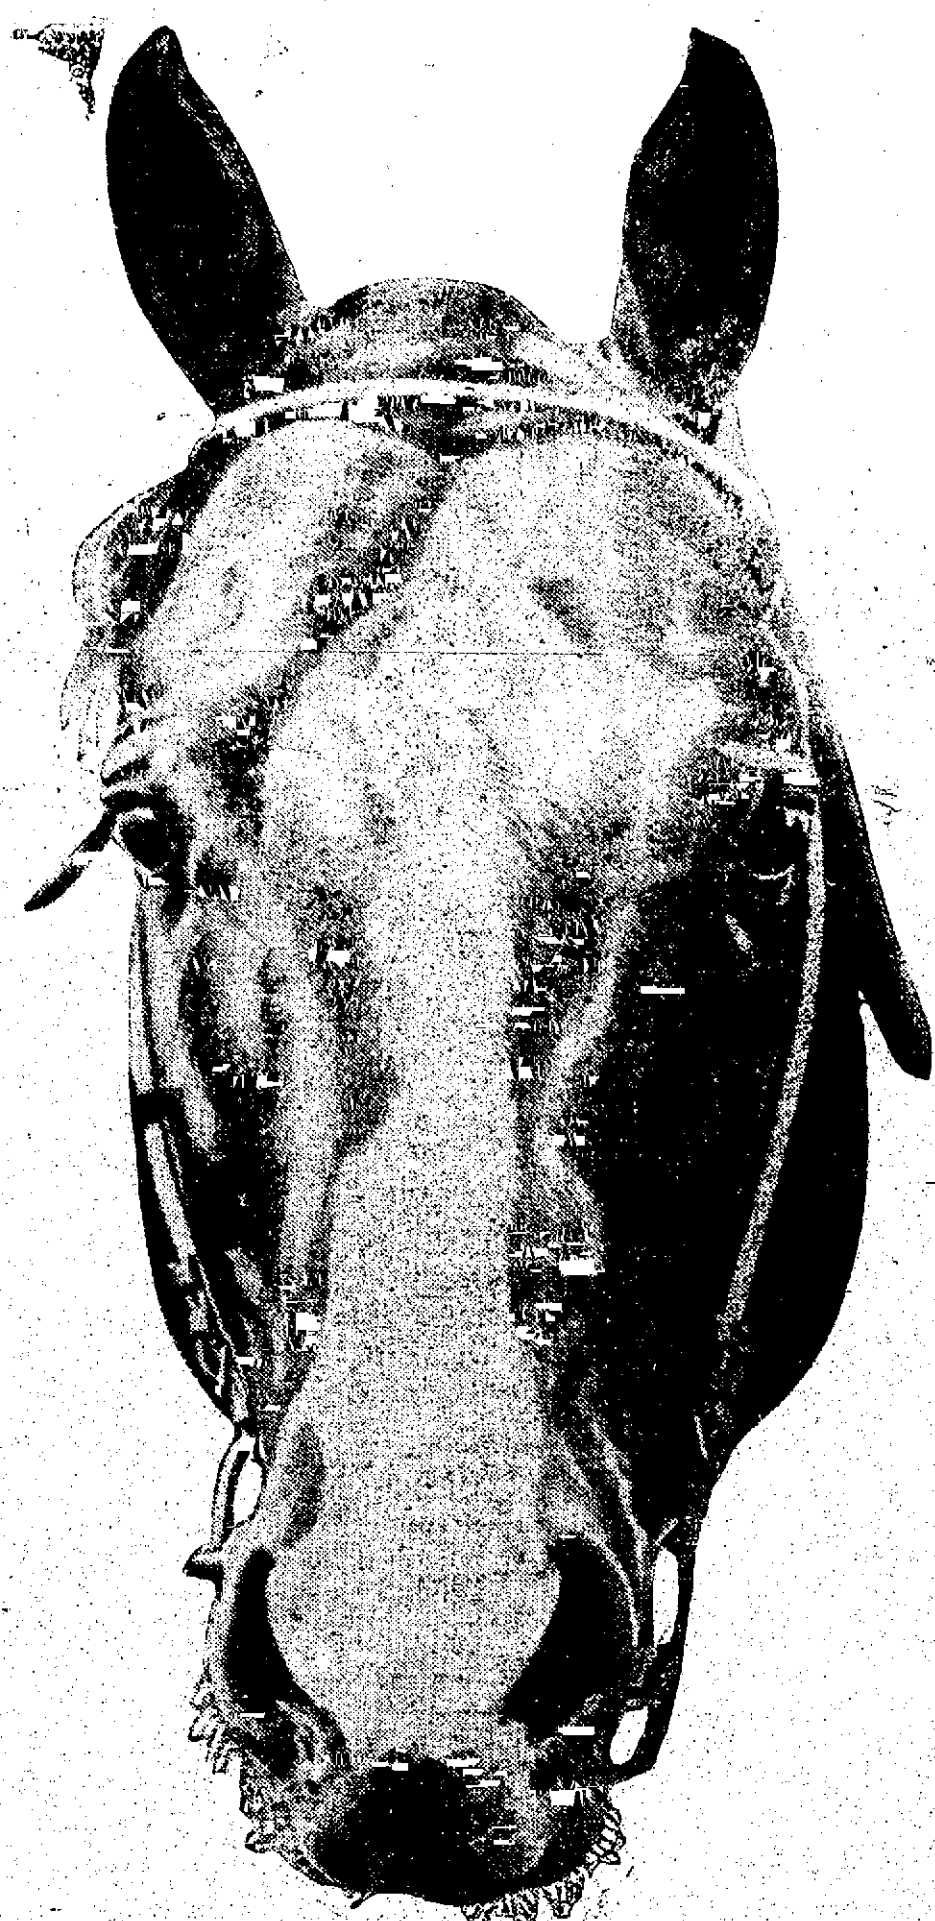

Though the portion of Kentucky known as the Blue Grass is comparatively small, from it came the greatest racehorses, the best utility horses and horses of a superior kind to any that the world has known. England has been for hundreds of years the standard of excellence for the horses called thoroughbred, having adapted to their country and use the blood of the Arab, the Barb and the Turk, but the Blue Grass bred horse has excelled them all.

Taking as the groundwork and foundation the English horse and inspiring him with the spirit of the new land, returning, we defeat England at her own game—the game that has been called the "Sport of Kings." "But New York says it is immoral—and New York is an honorable State." May we venture to paraphrase?

The peaceful rolling fields of Kentucky are being seared, many of them for the first time, with plow and harrow. This may not appear to those who have tilled land for hundreds of years a disaster, but disaster it is in many ways.

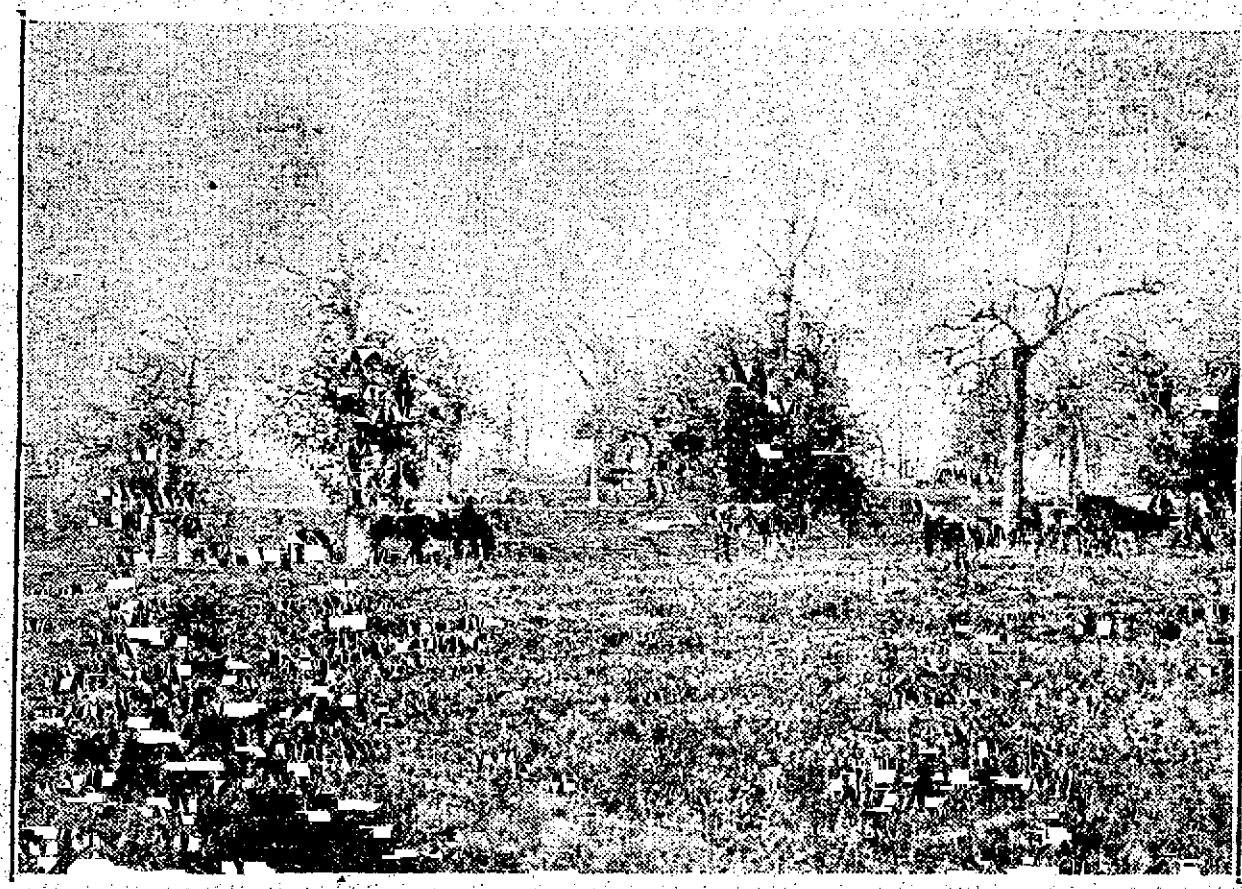

The "woods pastures," proudest example of Kentucky's individuality, are fast disappearing before the inroads of the transient tobacco grower's greed for more sunlight on his "crop." Tobacco cannot be planted

The enactment of the stringent anti-racing laws in New York State and elsewhere has wrought change on change in the fair fields of Kentucky. The land where once the thoroughbred was king is now given over to commercial agriculture, while the few colts still bred in the Blue Grass must display their prowess before an alien people.

Ultimus. discovered a machine to break hemp and work it while green, and if this is so the beauty of the land will fast depart in this industry also.

re, and a "farmer" as a man who lived on and cultivated such land.

In 1911 the per cent. of farms which produced a horse was 10 per cent. of the farms, or in ten. It is appalling to the lover of the thoroughbred, this enormous decrease from the horse production of former years.

Naturally, the increased use of automobile vans, egg planters and other mechanical innovations of the day in farming life has done much to influence the demand for the horse of the utility type.

more than one, or at most two years, without serious and lasting damage to the land.

Although they say the land can be returned to grass in five years, it is hard to find any single piece of land which has been used for tobacco, or hemp and is in satisfactory grass again within fifteen years. This is especially true of the land which is rented for tobacco. Many men who have loved and do love their homes are able to plant tobacco, and with care and rotation of crops, return the land in a few years without serious or any actual lasting injury.

It is the transient who bleeds the rich land dry and leaves it barren. Generally it is a renter, or one who buys to sell again, upon whom, those who really love Kentucky, cry, "Anathema!"

ON the estate of Mr. J. B. Haggin there is this year between three and four hundred acres planted in tobacco. Last year there was even more, but on his vast estate there is much room for many varieties of growth, and intelligent crop rotation will prevent a diminution of its beauty and value. There is, too, the great dairy, with the hundreds of magnificently bred cows, which furnishes milk and all commodities therefrom to half the adjoining country. Yet the refreshing ice cream does little to allay the burning indignation that the rolling fields, where hundreds of thoroughbreds once grazed, should be diverted from their use because of alien legislation.

Many travelers and those interested in stock came each year to visit the far-famed Blue Grass, and found there a condition that existed nowhere else. The last remnants of the old Southern plantation life were reflected in the life there, the broad fields and abundant stabling suggested the love of the horse, and the horse itself seemed to know that admiration and enthusiasm were his due. Any well-known racehorse enjoys being shown and attracting attention as much as a belle or beauty. There was a tone of outdoor interest, not of the "sporty" kind. The folk were genial and hospitable, very different from the weary, anxious farmer, who is a tiller of the soil and garnerer of grain.

The breeding of racehorses, that is, horses that win races—is not a haphazard game. It is an exact science, the result of long years of study and experiment. There is the theory of inbreeding, as intense as that of the Hebrews of old, the study of type, conformation and disposition, the return of the strength of the ancestor through many lines, that often almost exactly reproduces the form and even the markings of a far distant grand sire.

Then there is the study of care, of feeding and handling. All these things are as carefully looked after and are as important in detail as any college curriculum. The thoroughbred's growth must be forced, not only in strength, but in size, and the care begins with the mother, never ceasing till the yearling is run and the horse, which is weighed and not found wanting, will be sure to prove one where no smallest item of care and thoughtful training has been overlooked.

Gentle handling of a colt is one of the most important points in its training and it is a satisfaction to know that any roughness or cruelty to an animal is certain to result in an actual loss of dollars and cents to the owner.

IT is a work of unremitting care and diligence, study and thought, this perfecting of the noblest of animals, so that the life of the horseman and breeder is necessarily one of constant vigilance and interest. It is discouraging indeed to know that what America has perfected by years of labor and brain and hand and Providence encouraged by perfect environment and surrounding, has been destroyed by ignorance and greed; ignorance on the part of those fanatics who could see only the attendant gambling, greed on the part of the members of the racing fraternity and track owners, who could not see the honor of the royal game by reason of the lust for more gold that filled their vision.

But whatever the cause, the face of the Blue Grass country is rapidly changing. Everywhere the fields that lay green and luxuriant, in sod that had never been broken, are plowed and planted in tobacco and hemp, or even corn and other grain. Tobacco and hemp are crops which take from the soil so great a percentage of its strength, that two years at most is all that ever the accumulated strength of ages can endure.

The burly tobacco is very abundant and to the eye alone, a really handsome plant, but to those who love the land it seems only a devouring monster. From the very first feathery green leaf to the end, however, hemp is really beautiful. The plant is graceful and the work upon it during all the year—for it takes eleven months to complete the labor—is picturesque in every phase.

After it is dried, and put up into stacks, that closely resemble the pictured pagodas, then respread, and finally broken (by negroes, as a rule, though an occasional white man may be seen) it is still most pleasing to the eye and imagination. It is broken in the field, on hand breaks, or small wooden frames, beside each of which the "herds" or waste, is thrown upon a fire which makes a cheerful blaze and destroys immediately what is a poison to the land, namely, the hard outside part of the hemp. Only lately it is claimed they have

A Typical Thoroughbred Sire.

A FEW years ago a hemp or tobacco crop was an interesting novelty and was noticed and commented on for miles around; now one may drive often for several miles between fields of grain, without an acre of grass as far as the eye can reach. Our glory has departed from us and our land is left desolate. Once the Blue Grass part of central Kentucky was a playground of the gods and of a hearty past description. Now it is become a workaday land of commercial agriculture. Sic transit gloria mundi.

Ceasing to generalize, it is of interest to mention a few of the larger breeding establishments of the Blue Grass. For generations the Clays have been identified with the more conservative horsemen, and were among the last to cry enough, their entire stud having been sold within the past few weeks.

J. N. Camden has retained, and is increasing his thoroughbred holdings. John E. Madden has some of the best horses—thoroughbred and trotting—that are to be found anywhere. There are still such men as Mr. Belmont, whose stud is little diminished by the lessening of values; but those who retain horses expect to race abroad, and the glory therefore must be shared with another flag. James B. Haggin has scattered racehorses from pole to pole. Clarence Mackay has his horses in France, and the Argentine Republic has been made the center, for much of the bluest horse blood of the United States has been sent to mingle with what they had already secured from England.

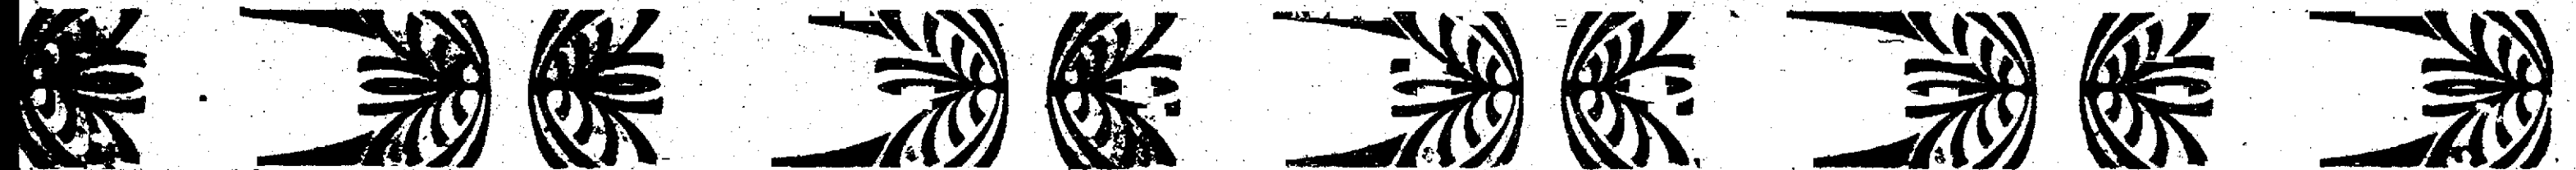

In November, 1911, James R. Keene sold to David Look his Blue Grass farm, Castleton, which has sent to all quarters of the globe horses that met and conquered the best of every country. His winnings were greater than any other breeder that the world has known, regardless of numbers raced. In 1907 and for many years his name has led the list of winning owners, in spite of the fact that many of the horses who won large sums for the men who raced against him were of his own stock, sold because of too great a number for an individual stable to race.

Eighteen years ago Mr. Keene and Major Daingerfield gathered together at Castleton, under Major Daingerfield's management, the nucleus of what became in a few years the most valuable and noteworthy collection of thoroughbred horses in this or any country.

It had been to Major Daingerfield a life-long study. To Mr. Keene it was also a grand passion and together they have worked for many generations of horses, sending all over the world, until the lines of blood desired had been gathered together like the links of a mighty chain, each perfect and without blemish. Then, growing out of the Major's theory of inbreeding as a means to perfect individuals, there has arisen a race of horses which can defy the world.

Yet to-day these colts, perfect, fleet and eager for the fray, must cross the ocean and display their prowess to an alien people, gathering together at the staid race-course men of other breeds and sires for the youth of this great Republic the strengthening and dignity that comes from a recognition of the right of gentleness to honest sport and to a man's part of a man's world.

The American youth must find his recreation in baseball, in football or track, all eminently sufficient for college and youthful diversion, but there is lacking in them the broadening dignity and inspiration of the sport of kings.

AMERICAN BEAUTY CLIQUE HUMBLER AN EMPEROR'S DAUGHTER

By HENRY W. FISCHER.

THE American Beauty League at the Berlin Court has humbled an Emperor's daughter! The American Girl has again scored a victory in the palace of royalty! And she has done it, as always, purely by reason of her personal wit and charm.

Princess Victoria Luise, the Kaiser's only daughter and leader in the tug-of-war between the young ladies of the German blood-royal and our fair country women in Berlin—the Misses Leishman, Devereaux, Waterbury, Collier, Senorita de Quesada and others—has retired from the fray, heart sick and broken in spirit, leaving the game of battle, Count George Constantine Fugger-Babenhause, to her rivals to do as they see fit.

The spoils of combat, a prisoner of war, the question now, puzzling the court gossips is, what will the Leishman-Devereaux-Collier faction do with George?

The wireless from Berlin, where Victoria Luise at present abides, echoes, "Their worst, of course. One of them will marry my pretty boy."

There was a distinct suggestion of a sob in the electric wave when it started, but the ending sounded more like right royal pique and indignation, even bitter resentment. But it will not go any further. George has been weighed in the scales of Hohenzollern matrimonial possibilities and has been found wanting.

Not in eligibility, for the Vienna Congress, that settled these matters once and for all time, declared the Fuggers eligible to intermarry with royalty. Kaiser Wilhelm's sister, Victoria, couldn't marry a Battenberg, for the Battenbergs are commoners, but the Herald's office admits that Count George is as royal as any king or emperor now ruling.

As a matter of fact, the Fuggers, too, are still rulers, their principality being a statelet in the state of

The fair Americans of Berlin have captured the handsome Count George Constantine Fugger-Babenhause for their very own. Whereat the Kaiser smiles benignly, while his only daughter, the Princess Victoria Luise, weeps. And now bitter warfare, without quarter, has been declared by the German Court ladies on their sisters from the land of Uncle Sam.

Kaiser. "The Fuggers of today are only mark-millionaires, despite their high-sounding titles, and if you married George your joint income would be scarcely more than fifty thousand marks ($12,500) a year."

That settled George's matrimonial candidacy, as far as the Princess is concerned, and Victoria Luise consented to leave Berlin forthwith. After cruising with her father in the Mediterranean she retired to Berlin, trying to forget George.

But letters to her chum and cousin, Princess Victoria Marguerite, the daughter of Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia, say she can't. "George Constantine is always in her mind, and the fear that one of her rivals may capture him renders her completely disconsolate."

IT'S only with us princesses of the blood-royal that money counts," she wrote. "The dollar-princesses needn't care a rap for money and can marry whom they like. If either of those American girls marries George I will never be happy again if I live to be a hundred."

The object of royal resentment and alleged American intrigue, Count George Constantine is a lieutenant in the Kaiser's bodyguard, famous for the grand white uniform, black breeches and silver, eagle-crowned helmet, a uniform the Kaiser himself likes to affect.

Count George will be 23 in July. In September Victoria Luise will celebrate her twentieth birthday. George Constantine is a handsome fellow, even handsomer than his comrade in the imperial bodyguards, Charles, Duke of Croix. The Croixes are descended from the ancient Hungarian kings, and they sported the title of duke when the Kaiser's ancestors were mere counts. Unlike the Fuggers, they remained immensely wealthy through all the centuries.

No wonder, then, that young Croix and young Fugger became the objects of many young women's fancy and—in some cases—envy. Yet the rivalry between the royal princesses, on the one hand, and the American girls already named, on the other, would scarcely have centered about either young man if the Kaiser had not played Paris to the American Helens at one of the court balls.

He was feeling in high spirits that night, and it may be he wanted to tease the two young Victorias—Luise and Marguerite—a bit. But whatever his reasons were, it happened that whenever one of the American girls paid her respects to the imperial family he threw conversational bouquets at her, so to speak.

OF Nancy Leishman, daughter of the Ambassador, he said:

"That's the slightly exotic type I love." And letting his eyes rest, perhaps longer than absolutely necessary, on Miss Devereaux, he remarked: "If extremely narrow skirts weren't the fashion they should be invented for a girl like that. She has a figure as graceful as a gazelle."

"There is the Gibson girl!" he cried, even within the hearing of Miss Waterbury. Miss Collier, who danced in the minut before their Majesties, he characterized as Terpsichore herself, at the same time commenting on her art of conversation.

"I am extremely sorry that mourning kept you away from court last season," he said to Senorita de Quesada, daughter of the Cuban envoy. "For I love to see pretty faces at my house."

And the Kaiser, talked so incessantly of the pretty faces and pretty figures and of the art of conversation and dancing of the American girl-guests, that the two royal Victorias and their cousins and friends were utterly disgruntled. Up to that time they had been on the best of terms with the Misses Leishman, Waterbury, Collier and the rest, but since the Kaiser had lent eyes and compliments for the "foreign contingent" the latter, automatically, became most repugnant to the neglected German girls, for nature is the same in all walks of life.

A princess, be her father ever so powerful, wants to be considered beautiful in her own right, and the girl that outshines her or attracts more attention than she she dislikes most heartily, the more so as every word uttered by a Majesty is law to those who surround him.

IF the two million favorites—Fugger and Croix—no longer learned what the Kaiser had said about Miss Leishman and her American friends than they thing, but her cousin, Marguerite, bold and buxom, wouldn't let her.

"These boys dance as we whistle or they don't dance at all," said Marguerite, and ordered the chief court marshal, Count Eulenburg, to explain this to Croix and Fugger. Eulenburg did explain, and the two Princesses kept the two lieutenants busy dancing all evening.

"First blood" for the two Victorias, but the American girls were not to be outdone. After the court ball was over they and their cavaliers, with many others, drove to the Hotel Adlon and danced until 4 o'clock in the morning. Of course, the two Victorias heard of it, and the German Princesses' League to Counteract Foreign Influences at the German Court was the result.

"If we don't stand together English will be the official language at court in 1913," is the slogan of the society.

Charter members are, of course, the two Victorias, but Marguerite is the president and moving spirit. She received only a scant share of good looks, this niece of the German Emperor, but what she lacks in comeliness she makes up for in energy. Marguerite was the whipper-in of the society and keeps it moving.

THERE is to be no preponderance of American girls at the court's Summer festivities and outings, at the country dances and regattas, and German princesses and counts that show any preference for the Americans are to be boycotted by the German girls and disciplined by their papas, which is an easy matter, since all the gentlemen in the royal set are army officers.

Among the young women of the aristocracy who allied themselves with the two Victorias against the Americans are Countess Westarh, Countess Marie Luise Strachwitz, Countess Polly Leindorff, Countess Larisch and Countess Hoves, some of whom, especially the two last named, are very pretty indeed. Other pretty girls in the league are Baroness Dickinson and the two Baronesses Schorlemer-Lieser, sisters.

But the league does not rely on titles and good looks only. They concluded that in order to win they must have the direction of women more advanced in years, women of experience that have seen life. So they appealed to the beautiful Princess of Pless, the owner of the famous pearls, who was Mary Cornwallis-West.

Though allied to her American sisters by the bonds of language, Princess Mary joined the two Victorias and brought with her to the league her bosom friend, Princess Thurn and Taxis, known among her intimates as "Pili," and the Countess Dorothea Oppersdorf. The two princesses and the Countess have promised to do their utmost to help the league and prevent the further ascendancy of their American rivals.

BETWEEN the allurement of the latter and the hard diplomacy of their own countrywomen, Count Fugger and the Duke of Croix have had a hard time of it so far, they confess. They had pledged their allegiances to the American girls, but it's no easy matter to resist a royal princess.

Yet they tried, particularly Fugger, while, on their part, the royal girls put the Count's loyalty to Miss Nancy Leishman to the severest tests. Then happened what has happened a hundred times before. Princess Victoria Luise fell in love with "the enemy."

At the beginning her only thought was to detach a desirable young man from the train of her rivals. Alas! she carried off his scalp and his heart as well, while losing her own.

But the sad flush of Princess Luise's love affair means no cessation of hostilities between the warring parties. The merry war goes merrily on, and as long as the Kaiser backs American Beauty against German Loveliness the Leishman-Devereaux-Waterbury-Quesada coterie need not fret about having all the dances they desire on their cards.

Like the princesses, the American girls, too, are now marshalled by distinguished patronesses, chief among them the Viscountess du Faraoude, the pretty sister of Baroness Speck von Sternburg; Baroness Schottelheim, who was Miss Faine, and Countess Sterstorff, nee Knüvvelton. Since the Kaiser paid a visit to the Countess at her villa at Nice, she wields much influence in court society.

So the poor German princesses are apt to continue in the background for some time to come. And what may happen to Count George Constantine and Duke Croix in the interim is in the lap of the gods, who in this instance, will doubtless receive their instructions from the American Beauty League.

Two Summer Nights.

A silvery Summer moon shone sweetly on the like-wise silvery sands.

The Summer sweethearts sat in silence. She was gazing up at the dim blue vault over them, where the little stars twinkled in a million tiny points of flame. He was gazing at her as if he'd like to eat her.

"Dearie, what makes the stars shine so dimly to-night?" she gurgled.

"They are outshone by the glorious light of your eyes, my darling," he whispered foolishly, "and so they pale their splendor, and—er—and—"

He didn't know how to go on, so he kissed her instead. And she was quite satisfied, perfectly content and glad.

Same moon, same sands, same people—they are married now.

"I wonder how many telegraph poles," she murmured thoughtfully, "it would take to reach from here to the moon?"

He looked at her as if he'd like to bite her. "One, if it was long enough," he snapped. "Don't ask such silly questions!"

And a solemn silence enveloped the Summer night.

A few days ago two young ladies entered a trolley car and found only standing room.

"I'm going to get a seat," said one to her companion. "Now, you see?"

Selecting a sedate-looking gentleman, she walked up to him.

"My dear Mr. Green," she exclaimed. "How delighted I am to meet you. You are almost a stranger. Will I accept your seat? Well I do feel tired, I admit. Thank you so much!"

The man rose. "Sit down, Jane, my girl," said he, as he court-teously pointed to the vacant seat. "Don't often see you out on a washing day. You must feel tired, I'm sure. How's your mistress?"

"My son is not what you would call musically inclined," said the fond mother, indicating the languid, poetic young creature who lolled beside her. "And yet I am anxious to have him take piano lessons."

The dean of the conservative rubbed his chin thoughtfully as he surveyed the sad young man.

"You see," she continued, "Percy's so delicate I think the exercise will be good for him."

Miss Nancy Leishman.

Bavaria. It comprises about thirty square miles, with fifteen thousand or more subjects.

Babenhause is the capital—a capital of nearly twenty-two hundred inhabitants. And the prince lords it over a dozen villages besides—Hiberbach, Wald, Waljenburg, Glett and others. As for Count George Constantine, he is heir to it all, as well as to some fine estates in Hungary. As far as titles go, the Hohenzollerns then have no advantage over him.

That's what Victoria Luise said and repeated a hundred times to her proud papa when the Kaiser remonstrated with her that a union of an Emperor's daughter with a Fugger was quite impossible.

"My mother was the daughter of a mediocrity duke," she insisted.

"But he is a Catholic," said the Kaiser.

"My Aunt Anna (the late Landgravi of Hesse) turned Catholic, and the same is reported of my great-grandmother, the Empress Augusta. And my Aunt Sophie (Queen Princess of Greece) is a Greek Catholic and all her children are of that denomination," insisted Victoria Luise, who had studied her lesson well.

Then the Kaiser had to eat humble pie before his own daughter. He had to confess that George isn't rich enough to wed a princess of Prussia.

At that point, it is claimed, Victoria Luise had the audacity to laugh into her august father's face.

"The Fuggers!" she cried. "Who financed the wars of the Emperors Max, Charles V. of Pope Leo X., and ever so many more kings and princes? Look at this!" she said. And the sly minx produced a copy of the famous painting commemorating the scene when Anton Fugger burned the notes of dead Emperor Charles V. in a fire of fine opices.

"At that time," continued Luise, "the Fuggers were reputed to own a hundred millions."

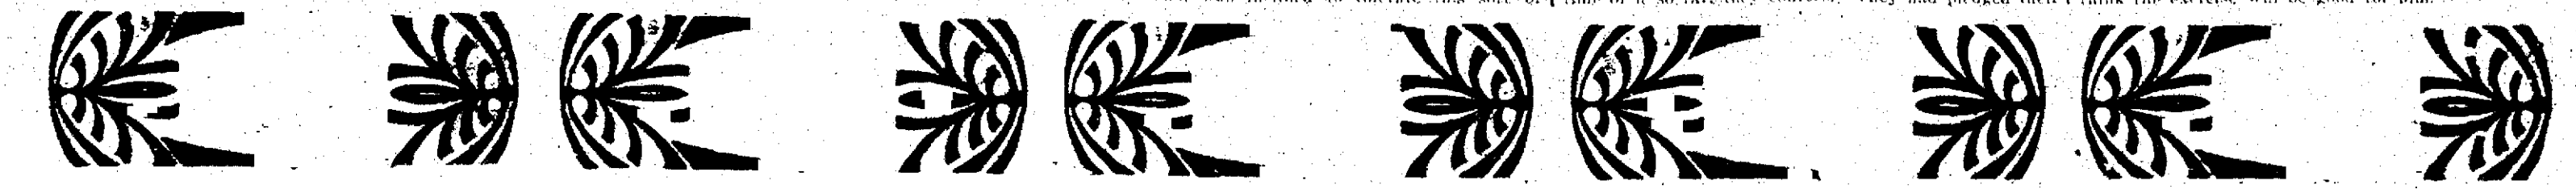

"But that's a long while since," returned the had eyes for the "Yankee girls" only. At court balls the royal princesses "command" their dancers. When the two Victorias saw that Croix and Fugger were paying attention to the "foreign contingent" only they ordered these gentlemen to dance with them again and again.

Once or twice, however, both had the audacity to send excuses, saying they had already engaged one of the American girls for the dance. Victoria Luise, who is rather timid, was inclined to tolerate this sort of

For the Ten Commandments Are East of Suez

by HEYWOOD BROWN.

MOST of the guilt rests on Kipling for he wrote:

"Ship me somewhere east of Suez, where the best is like the worst. Where there ain't no Ten Commandments an' a man can raise a thirst."

All of which is in direct opposition to the fact that a man may travel from Shanghai to Bombay and never give the slip to a single article in the Decalogue.

Like Standard Oil and American ragtime, the Ten Commandments encircle the globe. I had been led to expect that in Shanghai I would find a cheerful and happy community, each member of which was gleefully rolling down the purple path to perdition. Instead I found it populated by "respectable married people with umbrellas."

Of course one may go to the East and trample on the Ten Commandments, but he will fall foul of the law and public opinion just about as swiftly as he will in Boston, Mass.

It is a bit startling perhaps to find that you may not bet on the horse races in Japan and that roulette wheels may not turn in Hong Kong. In Peking I met an American clerk who was worrying lest he should lose a job on account of a spree which had lasted only two days.

A young American newspaper man visited Shanghai a few years ago and upon returning home wrote that the average business man of Shanghai never drank less than six cocktails a day. Shanghai was shocked and if the young man returns he will not be received by the best families. Think of it, six drinks a day! Why, if it was applied to the business man of Philadelphia he would protest that it was an underestimate. And yet the bard has the audacity to sing, "Where there ain't no Ten Commandments and a man can raise a thirst."

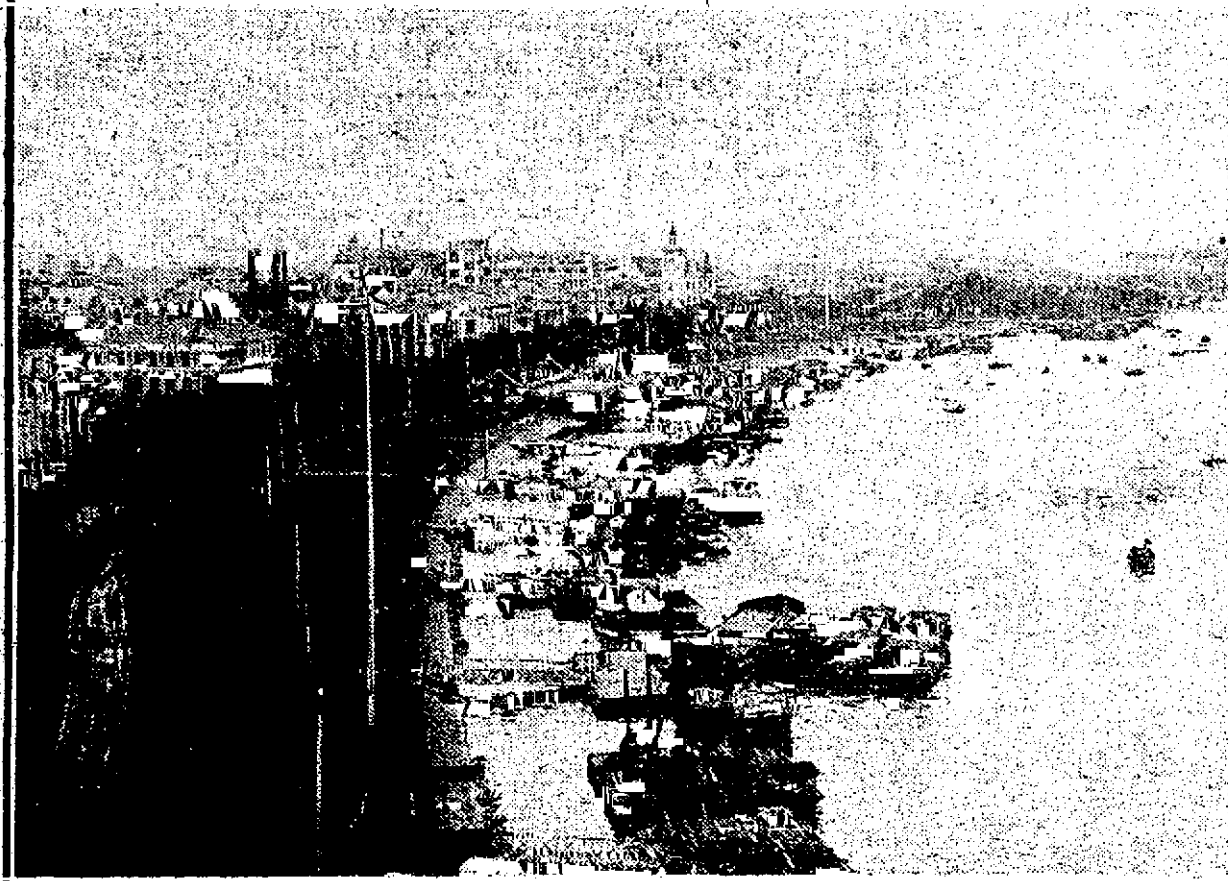

Of course he can raise it, but he must be circumspect in the quenching of it. In Nagasaki a young naval officer who should have been staging his own "Madame Butterfly" sat across a table from me and gloomily wondered when he would see New York again. I am confident that he had the right information when he said: "If you really want to bust commandments there's no place like Broadway."

And the Ten Commandments are not the only thing which you cannot leave behind you. For six months I never took a drink in a New York restaurant without being exhorted to "come on along" to listen to the orchestra of a colored man named Alexander. Going across the Pacific a Filipino orchestra on the steamer played the same tune with variations. In Honolulu they use it as an accompaniment to the "hula hula" dance and when I sat down in the Cafe Riche in Shanghai the proprietor, beaming upon me, said: "We have just received one of your new American songs, 'Alexander's Ragtime Band.'"

Of course Kipling is not the only guilty one. There have been others who have filled the East full of atmosphere, moonlight and mystery. There was Lafcadio Hearn, who pictured Japan before the coming of trains, tips and tooth powder. There may have been such a Japan once upon a time, but you will not find it now. If you try "Koneichu" (phonetic spelling) upon a Japanese he will come right back with a "Good afternoon."

It is hard to get any illusions about Japan. If you do deceive yourself for a few moments into thinking that you are in a strange and picturesque land of romance you run slap into a sign in English on a Japanese shop. "We develop photographs for tourists," and you realize that after all it is simply laid out for the visitor. In fact skinning the tourist has now supplanted jiu jitsu as the national sport of Japan.

ONE of the greatest frauds for which Hearn was responsible was the notion that the women of Japan are extremely pretty. There are a few who live up to the tradition, but for the most part they are a grubby, heavy-ankled lot of broad-faced and snub-nosed commonplaceness. What charm they have is largely in their national costume, for when they discard their kimono for Western style garments and take off their wooden clogs in favor of shoes they are the most ungainly of creatures and walk with a peculiar shuffling and intoning sort of step which reminds one of Lave Cross, who used to play very good third base for the Athletics before his feet went back on him.

I went into a tea-house in Kobe and took my rickshaw man along. I ordered sake for him, but very soon the Japanese waitress came back and said: "The rickshaw man says he no wants sake. He like beer."

There are five breweries in Japan now and as the population has them working nights it is likely that there will be more in time. The tea-houses of tradition, except such few as are kept alive for the sake of the tourist trade, will soon fall before the new beer halls.

IF the drama of Japan is another thing to which Western customs have given a body blow. In Yokohama one may count five moving picture houses for every theatre. Some of their pictures are of Japanese subjects, but for the most part their reels come from American and French exchanges.

Yokohama has a New York bar and a Brooklyn bar so there is no excuse for any resident of the metropolis not feeling at home. The influence of the suburb of New York is indeed strong and I saw it exerted in a peculiar way. A young man from a steamer which had just arrived went to the Grand Hotel and was told that every room was taken. He insisted, nevertheless, on signing his name to the register and wrote "Jay Madden, Brooklyn." An elderly man came up behind him and looking over his shoulder said, "So you're from Brooklyn, are you?"

"Yes," confessed the young man. "And yet when you're away from home you don't put your residence down as New York?"

"No sir."

The stranger turned to the clerk behind the desk. "Here," he said sharply, "give this young man the best room in the house. I'm the proprietor of this hotel," he explained, "and I come from Brooklyn myself."

Unless a man knows the wave from the West has engulfed the East, China will give him just about as many shocks as Japan. In Shanghai I was told that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Camille" were the most popular plays at the Chinese theatre and a book dealer assured me that a translation of "Three Weeks" was one of his best sellers among Chinese customers.

I TRIED hard to interview a suffragette in this city, but I was told by the young Chinese to whom I applied that they were all so shy that he feared it would be difficult. A shy suffragette sounded decidedly interesting. I thought, so I renewed my efforts and at last he told me that he had made an appointment. When we got to the door of the lady's house, which was in one of the narrowest streets of old Shanghai, her servant spoke a few rapid words in Chinese to my companion and then closed the door. "She says," explained my Chinese friend, "that her mistress has been called away to attend a socialist meeting."

It was also in Shanghai that I met a school boy of about nineteen who flung at me immediately after being introduced the question, "What do you think of the protective tariff?"

In Nanking I had luncheon with Wang Shing, a general who has spent twenty years and lost four fingers in trying to bring about the Chinese Republic. I was assured that he spoke no English, yet when the samurai, a native rice wine, was passed about he raised his cup and said, "Bottoms up." It was in fact his only phrase of English, but at the same time it was command enough of the language to take a man a good way.

IN Hong Kong a young Chinese lady boarded a steamer to greet a returning friend. She was clad in the traditional trousers which the Chinese women adopt and her hair was also dressed after the elaborate manner of her country. An American, struck by the novelty of the sight, rushed to his cabin and got his camera. Posting himself in front of the Chinese girl he exclaimed rapidly in amateur pidgin English: "Me takee picture. Can catchee. Can catchee."

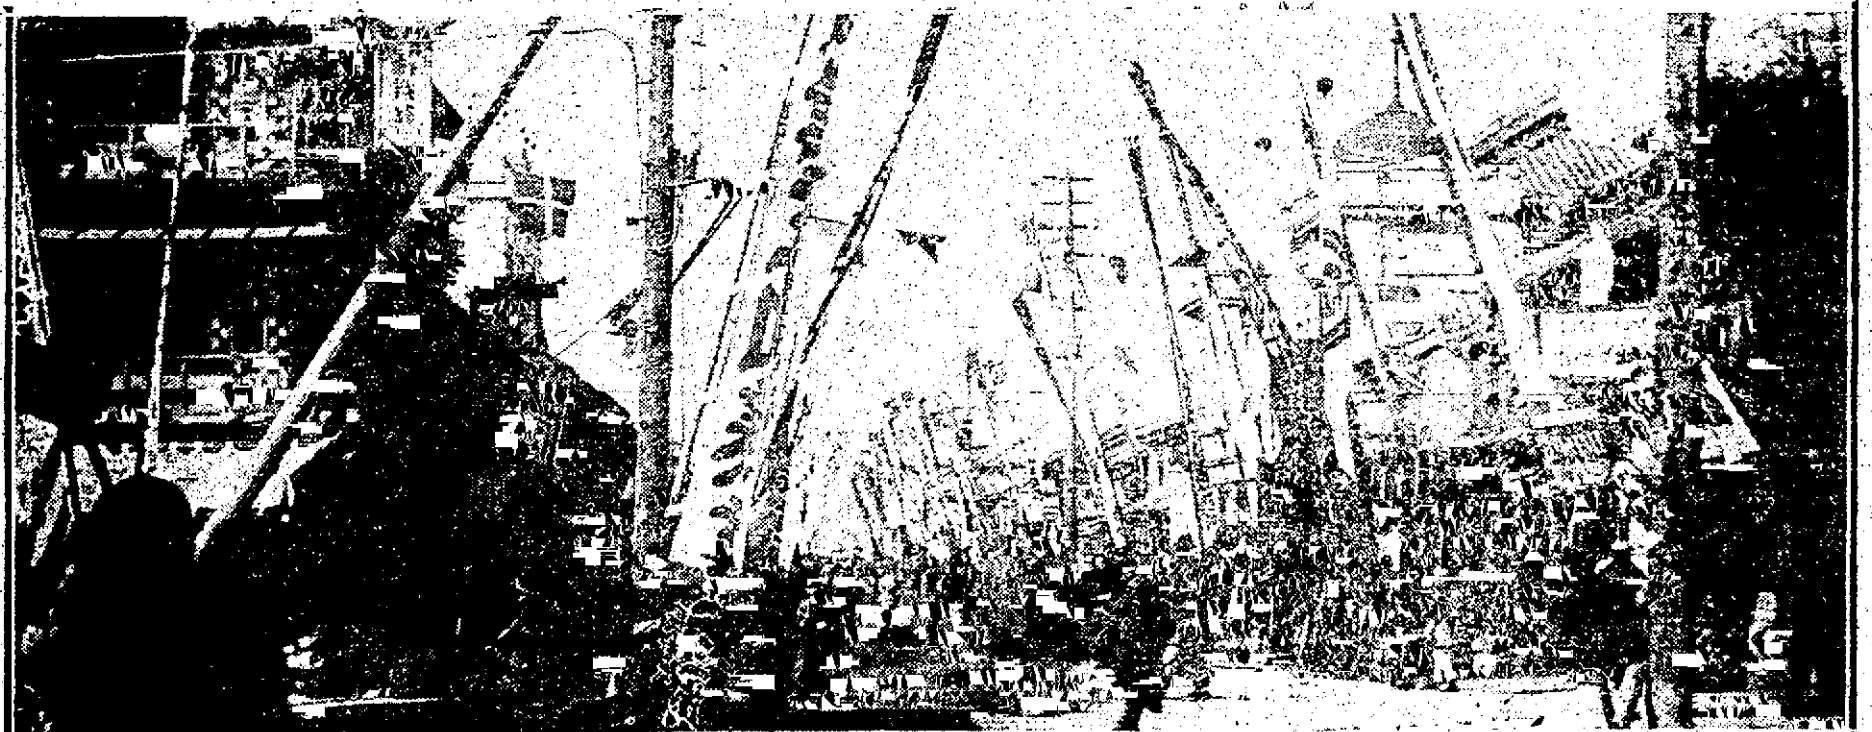

The young woman turned a look of intense scorn upon him. "You 'can catchee' but you may not," she said. "She had been graduated from Yassar only the year before."

In Peking, the capital and one of the oldest cities of the empire, one cannot help noticing the path of the Western wave. I sat in a poker game there with four Chinese, two of whom could speak no English but who seemed to have no difficulty in reckoning out straights and flushes. Incidentally the Chinese fondness for poker and the Chinese inability to play the game well are two of the chief reasons why American army officers regard Peking as the price billet of the Far East. A certain lieutenant who had left Peking just before Yunnan was being roundly cursed by his fellow officers for having endangered the goose that laid the eggs of gold. He had taken many thousands of dollars away from Chinese players in a single week and had won so heavily that two of the most consistent of the Oriental players had swept off forever.

IN the first cabinet of Yuan Shi Kai there were five graduates of Yale, and it is reported that they opened each conference by singing "Boola." In the national assembly there is now a single queue and only eight of the members wear foreign dress. Indeed it has been said that college clothes rather than foreign loans is the chief problem of China at the present time. The taste for Western cut clothes is keen and crude. Purples and light greens are the colors most affected and the cut which seems to be most popular is that shown in the advertisements of tailors who see they want to meet you face to face.

Of course Westernization is proceeding fastest in the towns along the coast of China, but even in the remote parts of the empire missionaries and cigarette salesmen are doing their share. The writers of romance will have to hurry up and get in a few last flicks, for the world will know very soon that China, Japan and the Far East in general have not only the Ten Commandments, but straw hats, cocktails, cigarettes, public schools and patent potato peelers.

If you really must know, the call of the East of which so much has been written is in reality nothing more than "Whisky soda."

DID BRET HARTE WRITE THIS STORY?

A Literary Puzzle Yet To Be Solved

Francis Bret Harte.

By FRANK H. BROOKS.

THIS is the story that was told to Bret Harte. He intended, he said, to write it some time.

Has it ever appeared?

It was told by a Wyoming man, who was at the Republican national convention in Chicago last June. We had motored out to a German cafe on North Shore Drive. Long, long ago I saw Laramie when it was a railroad terminus and was alive with more elements of humanity than can be found in most big cities.

In reply to questions about the town and its present environment the Wyoming man "looked over." If you don't know what that means you never played marbles when you were a boy. The Wyomingite didn't answer direct. He turned out all right, for he was focusing the story that is here given.

"The children of this generation out there," said the man from Wyoming, "are reading and reciting the stories and poems of Bret Harte. In the course of time a Wyoming boy or girl learns the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer, but they know their Bret Harte first."

"You have asked me about Laramie. That's what made me think of Bret Harte, for it was there he heard a story that I have been waiting to see in print ever since. The Laramie of that time was not the Laramie of today."

"If a stranger had dropped in on the old Laramie he would have been in doubt whether he was in the United States or Mexico or South America. The population was a composite of the tropics, with streaks of the States and dashes of Continental Europe. Men and women of all nationalities, kinds and creeds were in the jumble."

"It was the most picturesque aggregation between

It is a story of the Bret Harte type.

It was told to the great writer.

Bret Harte said that he would make a story of it, but he set no date.

If he wrote it what became of the manuscript?

The narrative never has been published until now.

the Missouri and the Slope. It was a blend of tragedy and comedy. Why, even a slouch hat would have been a curiosity. Everywhere was the sombrero and the rancho jacket and the free and easy garb of the vaqueros. If the camera man had been there then:

"THE story? There had been a glad day in Laramie. Whether it grew out of a shooting scrape, a hanging or a Fourth of July celebration I was not told. But the town had been overran with more than its usual mixed population."

"Late in the day two rancheros rode in front of the main hotel and told the proprietor to name his price for a layout of grub for a lot of folk who wanted to fill up before the dance that was to come off in the big saloon down the street."

"Men and women?" asked the Big Feeder. The rancheros said there would be both.

"Rucks and squaws?" "Maybe," was the reply.

"Senoritas?" asked the landlord, meaning senoritas. The rancheros having answered affirmatively and gleefully that of these there would be a plenty, the landlord, knowing where he lived, shut one eye and inquired as an afterthought: "And maidenas, I reckon?" "Maybe," was the answer.

"The landlord of that day had a glimmer of charity. This one at Laramie told the riders that he would set up grub for men, bucks and the like at $5 a head, women, senoritas, squaws and maidenas free. Men to wait on the women, senoritas and maidenas; bucks and squaws to help themselves."

"They say that nothing in the way of feed ever beat that layout. Some of the money taken in was found a long time after, hid away in strange places, for the landlord had such a knack that he forgot where he put all of it. There was no wine. The proprietor had no scruples about any brand of liquor, but he didn't care to have his customers smashed. The ginmill was in the shack where the dance was held, down the street."

"THE dance feature of this entertainment followed the feed. When a jacket or sombrero or manilla was taken off the garment was pitched into a corner. Everything discarded went into this heap. It looked like a bargain sale after the onslaught. The hall was lighted by candles inserted in wooden sockets."

"Sometimes a flickering taper fired the wood and a blaze flashed out, but a vaquero or ranchero either doused it with his sombrero or shot it to pieces. The atmosphere, needless to remark, was redolent of tallow, grease, powder smoke and clouds of burning cigar-ettes and Indian weed."

"The dances and music were never intended to be in accord. In the corner of the great room the schottische was under way; in another the polka; somewhere else the quadrille, and so on. Of course the fandango was the dance of the night. When it was on the other dances stopped."

"There had been a hull in the numbers and the shout and abandon of the ensemble had dwindled to a hum. The crowd in front of the deformed structure gave way to two riders whose manner indicated that they had been hurried. One of them, a Mexican, threw off a matador's cloak, dismounted and lifted his senorita from her mount as if she had been a feather. An attendant took charge of the habits and horses, and the new arrivals entered the dance shack."

"There was a parting of the crowd. Men and women fell back on either side of the hall, leaving the center entirely to the couple who, without noticing the attention bestowed, prepared for a fandango."

"THEY say that in all of Laramie's history there was never seen such a beauty as that senorita. She was born for the dance. She had youth and audacity. All Mexican women who are beautiful have the latter. Once in motion, with uplifted hands, her long, black lashes opening and closing in concert with her every action, she is said to have caused many of the women to clap their hands over the eyes of their escorts who stretched their necks and arms at the vision."

"Carried away for the moment with the commotion she had created the senorita removed the trappings of her headdress and let her wondrous hair fall over her shapely shoulders. A girle of red roses circled her waist. She picked it to pieces as she continued her sinuous movements and flung the petals right and left at the heads of the assemblage.

"The Women Had Settled Their Differences."

"As she neared the end of the avenue that had been made for her at the beginning of the dance an American broke away from a woman, a half-breed, who had been trying to blind his eyes with her hand and threw his cash before the senorita. In a minute she was in his arms."

"The dance was changed to a waltz. The senorita's escort who had brought her to the hall, would have broken her from the American's embrace, but for the quick, strong grasp of the giant, who seemed to have the only authority that had been seen in the festivities of the night. At the same time the half-breed who had lost her hold on her lover was swayed back by a crowd of men and women."

"IT was delight all over Laramie. The senorita, her escort, the American and his half-breed companion of the night had disappeared from the scene. How, when or where? What was that to those who remained? The music screamed as the tired dancers still whirled."

"The dance went on until the afternoon. An American who had seen it through was returning to his ranch a few miles away. He had stopped in the middle of a stream to let his jaded horse take water. On the bank ahead of him he saw the sheriff of the county. Resting beside him was a woman, the senorita. She was a prisoner. Two horses grazed close at hand. Around the bend of the river, two hundred yards away, were the dead bodies of the Mexican and the American."

"They had fought to the death according to the rules of the duello. The women, the senorita and the half-breed had acted as seconds. When the principals were lifeless the women settled their differences. The senorita's stiletto was buried to the hilt in the heart of the half-breed.

"The American asked the sheriff what he was going to do with his prisoner."

"Take her back to Laramie," said the official.

"What for?" asked the American.

"For trial," was the reply.

"The American told him the people of Laramie, who knew of the incident, would save him that trouble if he took the woman back."

"What do you propose?" asked the sheriff.

"Mount her on the swiftest of these horses, face her south and then go back to Laramie."

"The sheriff spoke to the woman in her native tongue. She was lifted into the saddle as if she had been a child. The animal appeared to know his mission. He leaped and dashed at one bound, and they say that his rider's hair, that she had loosened the night before in the fandango, stood out straight so swiftly did she ride."

"The next day the horse, riderless, galloped into Laramie. The sheriff knew that the girl must have reached the border."

"This is the story they told Bret Harte one night while he was waiting for a late stage."

Poultry Were Trained.

It was in a country village, and he was making preparation for "fitting"—the fourth removal in about twelve months. The minister happened to be passing, and remarked:

"What! Removing again, John?"

"Yes, sir," replied John.

"You are taking your poultry, too, I see. I think they will be getting tired of being moved about."

"Getting tired?" said John. "Why, bless you, sir, they are quite used to it now. Every time they are a furniture can they run into the yard and lay on their backs with their legs in the air waiting to have them fed."

BEWARE THE BURGLAR!

THE burglar studies human nature carefully as he studies the verbs; he contemplates cracking. And just about this period of the year he smiles a big smile, well knowing that holiday time is his harvest time.

But if the thoughts of people are turning to the country, it is no reason why the path of the burglar should be made smoother because of the carelessness of householders. A few simple precautions may outwit him.

There is, for example, no necessity to advertise the fact that you are going away, and that the house will be empty. News has a habit of spreading, and the burglar is an expert at cross-examining servants and tradespeople. Don't put down your shades. And don't be content with casually mentioning your contemplated holiday to the policeman on the beat; call at the local station and tell the officer on the dock.

Of all the ways of entering a house, the best for the burglar is by the roof. Therefore be careful about the roof-doors and skylights. If you have an upright roof-door, so that the skylight can be cleaned from the roof, the inside should be covered with a sheet of iron not less than one-eighth of an inch thick and should be wedged from the inside or fastened with thumb-screws. If the burglar finds a wife near this door he will promptly put it out of gear. To thwart him, bark the alarm-wire with a strip of sheet-iron placed all round the frame of the door. When he finds he cannot get at the wire, your visitor will probably depart.

HERE is a very simple way of fastening a window effectually. Arrange a thumb-screw to pass through both frames on each side working through metal plates let into the sashes. When these are properly placed no jimmie can force up the sash.

The fastening of the door can be made effective by having two steel rods, one at the top and one at the bottom, just where they are not expected, or by using a stout steel rod jointed in the middle. It should be hinged at one end to the door, eight or ten inches from the hinge-side, and at the other end hinged to a block of wood firmly inserted in the wall at the side of the door, and not too close to it.

In its normal state the bar remains slightly bent at the joint, so the door opens and shuts without trouble. If, however, the bar is pushed up-tight, a rigid obstruction is placed in the way of opening the door. When the door is protected both top and bottom, it is impossible to open it from the outside.

A skeleton key or a piece of bent wire can very seldom pick a good modern lock; neither can a hairpin, as is popularly supposed; but cheap locks, like those frequently used for back doors, fall easy victims to skeleton keys. This, however, can be prevented by a small catch which drops down behind the bolt when it is shot and makes it impossible to open the door from outside.

PORTABLE radiators should never be left about.

Where there are fall pipes, the space between the pipe and the wall should be stopped by cement for about twelve feet from the ground, and then the burglar can neither get his hand nor a strap round the pipe to aid him to reach the bedroom window. For kitchen windows perforated sheet iron should be used instead of zinc, which is easy to cut through. Loose coal-plates on the pavement should be securely fastened from the inside.

Letter boxes should be carefully guarded, for letters left during your absence can easily be extracted by smearing a disk of leather with birdlime, lowering it into the letter box with a piece of string, cautiously drawing the letter to the slot and pulling it out with forceps.

The best place to keep valuables, if they must be kept in the house, is where the burglar will not think of looking for them—in the wastepaper basket, for example. Or another good plan is to pawn the property for a small sum. "Tinkie" is a very careful custodian.

If you can arrange for some one to come in once or twice during the day to feed and exercise a dog, it is a good thing to have one behind. The dog should be left to roam about. A terrier is the burglar's worst enemy.

A hotel guest took kindly interest in a bright-faced page boy who had answered his calls very promptly. "What is your name, my boy?" he inquired. "They call me 'Billard-boe,'" replied the youth. "Billard-boe?" And why is that? "Because I work so much better with a good tip."

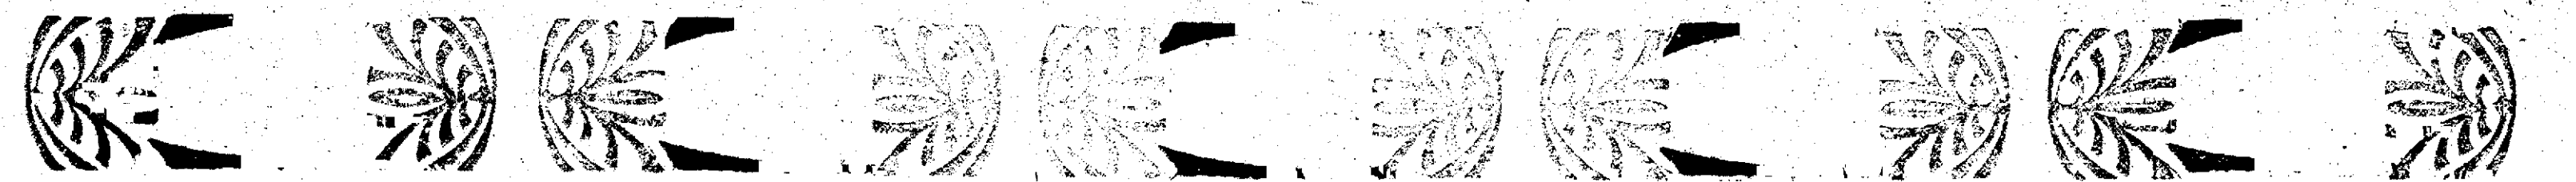

When the young physician's motor car reached the scene of the accident there was nothing to do; all the victims had been so slightly hurt that they were able to walk home. The young doctor was keenly disappointed, but his chauffeur spoke up cheerfully: "Never mind, doctor. I'll run down some business on the way home."

"You said you were going into some business that would bring you quick returns," said a young fellow to his chum.

"I did," was the answer; "I am sending manuscripts to the magazines."

"Life," remarked the sentimental bachelor, "is like a game of cards."

"It is more like a game of chess, from my point of view," rejoined the married man. "I invariably move once a year."

INITIALS FOR MARKING LINEN

This mode of lettering will be found very decorative in marking linen and personal belongings. It is more easily deciphered than the old English lettering and prettier than the script style.

In embroidering these letters pad them first as desired, then work them over and over in satin stitch, bringing the stitches close together so that the work will be even.

MISS NOKKIS' ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

MISS R.—Neither designs stamped on linen, nor perforated patterns are sold as the designs are drawn so that they can be transferred directly from the page by means of impression paper.

A sheet of impression paper, costing ten cents a sheet, can be purchased in any stationery or art store. One sheet will last a long time and can be used for a great number of patterns.

When transferring the blackberry centerpiece, draw a circle with a radius of nine inches and place the scallops on the outside of this circle, so that the inner points of the scallops just touch the circle and then trace your pattern.

If you follow this plan you will have no difficulty in transferring the design.

Crocheted Bags.

Mrs. E. M.—The crocheted bags now so much in vogue are made with white mercerized cotton. The cotton is also made in colors so that a bag matching any costume can easily be fashioned. The cotton can be purchased either by the skein at fifty cents, or by the ball at twenty-five cents, one skein being equal in quantity to two balls.

The ball cotton is perhaps more convenient to work with, but that is the only difference.

Lazy Squaw Stitch.

J. B.—The easiest stitch in basketry is the Lazy Squaw stitch, which looks something like the long and short stitch in embroidery, and is made by winding raffia around the foundation and several times and then taking a stitch to the row of work underneath.

This stitch holds the work firmly but not very closely together.

In Indian basketry the stitches are usually placed closely together, so that this stitch doubtless derived its name from some lazy Indian squaw, who did not care for the tedious close work.

Plain Crochet Blouses.

Miss M.—Just now, the plain crochet as it is called is more in favor than the Irish crochet, and blouses trimmed with plain crochet are very much worn.

Heavy crochet is not suitable for these waists and some fine lace pattern should be chosen. These waists are trimmed with wheels, strips of insertion or filet crochet yokes and sleeve cuffs.

The best way to make a plain crochet blouse, is to use an old waist ripped apart as the guide and with this before you, plan just how you wish to arrange the motifs, insertion or yoke and then make it to fit the pattern. When the crocheting is completed, it will not be hard to fit to new material.

Book Holder.

Reader.—A book holder, which is very convenient to carry a book when traveling, is made of a firm piece of linen, thirteen and one-half by nine inches.

Make a strip of the linen into a cord, using twice for the filling and use this for the handles, making each handle ten inches long. The handles are then sewed to the short ends of the linen.

At each end baste pockets, two and three-fourths by nine inches, and then stitch the case all the way around.

The holder can either be stenciled with the owner's initials or some very conventional design.

This book holder is also very handy to carry books to the library or club.

Lace Making.

Mrs. W.—Directions for making the lace published December 31, 1911, were not given as the illustrations were made especially large and plain, so that the needlewoman could copy the pattern directly from the paper.

Set of Tea Dollies.

Mrs. O. R.—A set of tea dollies seen the other day would be just the thing for your veranda tea table, so will describe it for you, as the set was very unique as well as attractive.

The dollies were of white linen trimmed, and each embroidered with an irregular bow knot having long ends, through which an appropriate quotation was worked in outline stitch.

This set was embroidered in green and old blue to match blue china used on a green willow tea table, but the dollies would be equally pretty if made to match any other color scheme.

The lettering should all be done in one color, and the bow knot can either be embroidered in a color or white. In the set described the lettering was done in old blue and the bow knot in green.

Appropriate quotations can easily be found and, of course, the quotation for each dolly should be different.

"A merry heart maketh a feast," and "Sweet is the sweet," are two suggestive quotations.

Shadow Eyelets.

Anna K.—Shadow eyelets are those which are much heavier on one side than the other giving the effect of shadowing.

This effect is produced by padding one half and outlining the other half, and working as you would ordinary eyelets, taking long enough stitches on the one side to completely cover the padding.

If these eyelets are used for a border or to take the place of a scallop, they can either be half buttonhole stitch, the other half worked with an over and over stitch used for ordinary eyelets, or they can be made entirely in buttonhole stitch.

Wrap for Convalescent.

A. B. G.—A little wrap which would prove most comfortable for the convalescent can be made of two yards of challis, lined with China silk.

Cut a slit six inches in the middle of one side of both the challis and lining. Line the strip of challis with the silk and turn back the corners farthest from the neck for cuffs.

With the addition of two covered buttons and buttonholes the wrap is complete.

A pretty pattern in outline stitch could be substituted for the challis, and then a lining would not be needed, but the edges should be bound with narrow ribbon and the wrap tied with ribbons. If made of plain material, such as cashmere, the wrap could be embroidered.

This little wrap would certainly be a lovely gift and is so simple of construction that anyone could make it.

Material for Lingerie Garments.

Ada B.—Crepe de chine has now become a very popular fabric for hand-made underwear, and as it is durable, launders well and can be packed in a very small space is especially nice for those who expect to travel.

Blue, pink and white crepe de chine are all used but the embroidery is usually done in white.

Embroidery is not only used on these garments, but lace of all kinds is combined with and these garments decorated with embroidery, Irish crochet, insets and edging are especially lovely.

While the price of the hand embroidered garments seen in the shops is prohibitive for many, the clever needle worker can easily make and decorate a set of underwear for herself with crocheted medallions and embroidery.

Lace medallions and edgings make very nice pick-up-work and are quickly made by utilizing odd moments.

Boudoir caps as well as negligee garments are lovely made of crepe de chine.

No Patterns Sold.

M. D.—Perforated patterns of the designs published are not sold as they can be transferred directly from the page by means of impression paper.

Personal replies are not given unless a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

Shirt Waist.

Mrs. J. J.—The shirt waist design you wish was published June 2, 1912.

The embroidery should be carried out in satin stitch, but as the little rosebuds are so very conventional, any color can be used with good effect.

Thank you for your appreciation of the patterns and an index card that you are able to apply them so effectively.

To Mend Tablecloth.

Mrs. Mary. Tablecloths and also towels and linen can be mended on the machine. All the newer machines have a special attachment for this purpose, but it can be done without any attachment, if a pair of embroidery hoops are used.

The cloth is placed between the hoops, wrong side out, and then turned over so that it will lie flat under the presser foot and be right side up when mending.

The machine stitch should be made as long as possible, with the upper and shuttle threads very loose, and then the presser foot is raised and the stitching is done back and forth, starting it parallel with a thread of the linen. Stitch back and forth in one direction and then turn and stitch in the opposite direction.

If the hole is very large, cut a piece from an old napkin. Put the cloth over the loop, then baste the piece over the hole, without turning in the edges and then stitch back and forth over the raw edges.

Booklet on Macramé.

Mrs. N.—A booklet on macramé can be purchased in any store where art needlework supplies are sold.

These little booklets sell for fifteen cents.

Names of firms cannot be given through the columns of the paper.

Pin Cushion.

Mrs. Q.—A rather unique pin cushion and one which is especially nice as a gift for one who expects to go abroad, is made of two thin silk flags, with a narrow red ribbon sewed between, forming a mattress cushion. Fill the cushion and use blue silk for the tufts.

Stick black and white headed pins into the cushion so as to form letters spelling Bon Voyage.

A Gorgeous Dress

AT two large fancy dress parties recently there were some exquisite gowns to be seen. One which was made for a handsome brunette was in Persian style, with an undergarment of violet satin with long full trousers to the ankles, the trousers being mounted on a kind of skirt or bodice, which was plain and fitting. This was kept in position with a broad green silk sash, which was tied tightly over the hips and round the thighs. Over this was a kind of veil of gold gauze, and over this again a coat of bright red silk.

The finishing touch was supplied by a scarf of very fine net in coral pink, while the turban was of purple and gold silk. Even the ordinary fashions have a strongly Oriental flavor at present in Paris, and Chinese robes or gowns of Persian colorings have an immense vogue in the world of dress.

Just now the lingerie frock for outdoor wear is, of course, carrying all before it. Colored foundations are very fashionable for these little frocks, and in a recent case an embroidered lawn was mounted over a slip of coral satin with three little superposed flounces at the edge of the skirt. Each flounce was bordered with narrow lace, while the top one was set in place with a drawn insertion of lace as a heading. The top of the corsage was concealed by one of the little coats so dear to the heart of the dressmaker, which, in this instance, was of coral satin.

This was drawn in at the waist with a narrow lace insertion above, and below a very narrow band, while the rounded basque sloped away to the front, where it was only an inch or two in depth. The elbow sleeves were turned back with deep shaped cuffs edged at the top with two rows of narrow lace, and there was a double round scalloped collar, the outer one of satin and the upper of lawn. The white passementerie buttons which trimmed this costume were introduced in double rows in groups of six.

Some pretty hats for the dog days are being made of embroidered lawn in modified Cherry Ripe fashion or in a slightly developed Dutch cap style. The crown is unsifted and without wire, but envelops the head entirely, and is finished with a fairly full trail of embroidery edging that makes a very soft and becoming frame to a young face. It is, however, only the girl who is still on the sunny side of her twenties who can wear the Cherry Ripe hat and no greater mistake can be made than for a woman who is no longer young to adopt it.

A bunch of wheat laid flat against the side and falling over the brow is the only trimming. Such a hat is not much protection for the face in sunny weather, but is very dainty, very youthful, and pretty.

So far, however, the palm as regards millinery for morning wear might be given to the rather small hat of stiffened black tulle or watered silk. Such a hat has a chic which grows or lingers can never have and is also full of character. It is simply itself as regards trimming, the only decoration required being a black feather cluster.

THE POSTILION HAT

The fancy for the postilion hat has been short-lived so far as Paris is concerned, and London never greatly cared for millinery which the Parisienne accepts as being amusing. More or less curly of brim, and with full stiff crown, these hats trimmed with a feather on the side or a floral aigrette had a brief vogue, and certainly when new they were most appealing. They could not, however, bear repetition, and since people have taken to wearing them they have lost their attraction. For once the Frenchwoman seems to have forgotten that the fact of a hat being chic when worn by a woman of one type may make it impossible for those who belong to another.

This style of hat is, however, being made for Autumn, and milliners are looking favorably upon its possibilities in heavier felt and plush.

TOLEDO JEWEL WORK

Ladies' sovereign cases are the prettiest of trifles. They are made as flat as possible, sometimes with two or more pieces, but sometimes only with one, like a dainty powder box. One of the latest fads is to have them made of enamel in various colors, and another notion is to use the gold band with black of Spanish jewel work. This Toledo ornamentation is in fact very popular for personal adornment, but for toilette and specimen table ornaments. One also sees Toledo decorated hair-combs and hairpins.

Newest in Neckwear

NEW way of fixing up the tailored blouse whose neck-band and front closing is worn and frayed is to wear with it a collar with tabs. For a quite plain waist, make a Dutch collar of colored pique finished with white or of tan linen finished with a color, and then attach to each end a jacket of plaited net edged with Valenciennes. By joining the inner edges of these jackets, the entire front of the blouse will be nicely covered. Or make a sailor collar of white, blue or tan linen and from its points suspend narrow tabs trimmed with small black satin buttons and falling over a single jacket of shadow lace, especially smart with a rose or Dutch lace tailored blouse is a black satin sailor collar with a double jacket of corded shadow lace marking its front.

***

For the tulle, satin or batiste blouse which has passed its first youth, make an outside chemise of embroidered lawn and Valenciennes, of shadow lace with point de Venise, of Irish or of white net, trimmed with black Brussels and black satin buttons. If the collar of the blouse is an utter wreck and the cuffs in a deplorable condition, make a guimpe of Lierre, shadow or dotted net to fill in the space where the neck must be found out and provide mousquetaire cuffs for the sleeves that are slashed off at the elbow.

***

Novel indeed is a piece of neckwear composed of scalloped-edged fine linen having at each side of its center two large eyelets threaded with a velvet ribbon bow and coming at the top of a jacket, also of the scalloped linen. Also a novelty is a black satin turn-over collar that its above a plaited frill of shadow lace flanked at each side by a jacket and equally fetching is a little pump bow of white linen, inset with Irish lace motifs.

***

Charming with a white lingerie frock are the various neck-pieces of black velvet ribbon. Many young girls affect the bands having a little cluster of tiny natural-colored flowers at the front, while others go in for the wide bows of the velvet ribbon which have a cross-piece of silk flowers.

Moonlight Blue Gowns

A beautiful gown for a recent occasion was made in a shade of moonlight blue satin of the softest consistency, known as peau de sude. The gown opened over a petticoat of the moonlight de-soie. While one side of the corsage was likewise of the filmy fabric relieved with trimmings of dull gold.

Another gown for the same occasion was in a supple and beautiful gold tissue shot with flageolet green. The front of the gown was draped with a spoon-shaped panel of flower-patterned Brussels lace, veiled with a shadowy drapery of flageolet green tulle illusion, while the tissue was left uncovered at the back. The corsage itself was hidden under a soft fichu drapery of Brussels lace, showing a little gathered tucker of pure white chiffon, while over it was the same soft shadowy veil of green tulle illusion, the drapery entirely hiding the sleeves.

Rose Design in Filet Crochet

There are so many ways in which this design might be effectively used that one hesitates to begin enumerating them. For instance, if crocheted in fine cotton a very beautiful insertion, to be combined with a simple pattern in Irish crochet, will be the result and, used in alternate strips with the Irish insertion, a charming blouse trimming or collar may be made.

***

If wished for strips for one of the very popular bed spreads the work should be done in heavy crochet cotton or macramé thread. The pattern is so easily followed and the work so simple that almost any one who is familiar with the crochet needle will be able to execute the design.

A macramé design makes the work of following the design more simple, and the detail of the stitches more clear.

An Attractive Costume

There is a kind of linen which is almost as thin as muslin, having a loosely-woven mesh which makes it nearly transparent. This is trimmed lavishly with drawn-thread work, through the large open squares of which is visible the foundation of white sponge cotton. This dress is rare blue or cherry color, is equally handsome, and is smart enough for dress occasions, for face meetings, garden parties, and so on.

To wear with this frock there is a quaint and pretty hat of tighorn straw, curved and bent after the manner of a shepherd's hat, with a low dome crown entirely veiled in very fine black tulle illusion. The tulle is raised rather high above the crown, and rising in billows toward the back, while the hat is supported by a band of tulle, which is pinned on the left shoulder and left to drape in a streamer from thence.
